HEAD OFFICE: 309, PITT-STREET, SYDNEY.
Deposits received to any extent.
6 per cent. per annum allowed on deposits for 6 months.
7 per cent. per annum allowed on deposits for 12 months.
£5 per cent. per annum is allowed by this Company on current accounts.
In addition to the interest allowed, depositors participate in the profits.
H. G. SWYNY, Managing Director.

MUTUAL LIFE ASSOCIATION OF AUSTRALASIA.
Established 1869, and Incorporated by Act of Parliament.
The Second Oldest Mutual Life Office in Australasia, and the First to Free Assurance from Restrictions.
BONUS YEAR, 1883-4.
ALL POLICIES EFFECTED BEFORE 30th JUNE, 1884, will participate in the DIVISION OF PROFITS to be then made.
At the last investigation, viz., 30th June, 1879, a surplus of £11,000 was shown, out of funds amounting to £112,746, by an absolutely pure premium valuation.
At the close of the present Quinquennium it may be confidently expected the INVESTED FUNDS WILL EXCEED £350,000.
The Association's POLICIES are INDEFEASIBLE from date of issue, and NON-FORFEITABLE while surrender value lasts. Its Conservative Management secures business at a lower rate of expenditure than any other Mutual Life Office established in Australia within the last THIRTY YEARS; and careful selection of lives has resulted in a remarkable reduction of its yearly mortality experience, as regards number, amount, and per centage on the existing Assurances.
For Tables of Rates, and full particulars, apply at any of the Offices below mentioned.
J. C. REMINGTON, Secretary.
Principal Office: GEORGE and WYNYARD STREETS, SYDNEY; with Branches at Auckland, Brisbane, Melbourne, Adelaide, and over 200 Agencies throughout the colonies.

The tenders must be addressed to the Secretary to the Post Office, Sydney, and endorsed "Tender for the Conveyance of Mails."

The Postmaster-General does not bind himself to accept the lowest or any Tender.

Each successful tenderer for the mail services numbered Western Roads—40, 45, 52, 56, and 61; Southern Roads—13, 27, 53, 57, 60, 68, 69, 75, 76, 85, 87, 88, 89, and 90; and Northern Roads—18, 24, 33, 43, 67, and 74; must, within three days, either personally or by the hands of his agent in Sydney, deposit with the Bank of New South Wales, Sydney, to the credit of the Secretary, General Post Office, Sydney (and must lodge the bank deposit receipt therefor with the Secretary to the Post Office), a sum equal to 20 per centum of the annual amount for which the tenderer offers to undertake the service. This amount to be absolutely forfeited to the Government in case the person whose tender may be accepted shall fail to complete, within thirty days of the date of notice of the acceptance of his tender, the usual bond and contract to the satisfaction of the Government. The notice of acceptance of tender, if delivered at the Sydney address of the tenderer or his agent (which address should be stated in the tender), shall be deemed sufficient.

The money deposited in the bank by the successful tenderer, in each case, to be returned after he shall have performed the service for, say, one calendar month, to the satisfaction of the Postmaster-General.

For full particulars see Government Gazette, a file of which is kept at every post-office in the colony. No tender will be considered unless the terms of the notice published in the Gazette be strictly complied with.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN ISCHIA.

(BY OUR CORRESPONDENT AT ROME.)

ROME, Aug. 10.

Two years, three months, three weeks, and three days had gone by since the ruinous earthquake of 1881 at Ischia—of which at the time a full account was sent you—when the dread visitant returned, and on the night of Saturday the 28th ultimo, the three flourishing towns of Casamicciola, Forio, and Lacco-Ameno were completely destroyed, burying 5000 human beings in their ruins. Only recently humanity had been shocked at the hecatombs of Sunderland and the Clyde, and one has scarcely time to breathe before they are cast into the shade by this wholesale sacrifice of life—men and women in their prime, children in their early promise, and the aged who were looking forward to a quiet deathbed in their old homes. From the lips of friends just returned from this scene of desolation I write down the following description:—No sooner arrived in Naples, we hastened to find means to start directly for the unhappy island. Already (August 1st) orders were in force to prevent any persons from going there who had not friends to look for, or a special purpose. Even furnished as we were with official letters to the Minister Genala, who directs the works at Ischia, the Prefect of Naples tried to dissuade us from going, with the dangers to life and health we should incur. At length, insisting upon the precautions to be used, he gave us the requisite permission to pass between Naples and the island of Ischia in one of the steamers employed by Government in sending soldiers and provisions, and in bringing the poor wounded creatures rescued from the ruins to the hospitals at Naples.

The steamer was crowded with people who were hastening from the mainland to look for their relations and friends, most of them in deep distress and anguish at the loss of their nearest and dearest. It is impossible to describe the utter ruin and destruction which met our eyes as we approached the shore and landed at where was once Casamicciola. Every landmark obliterated in one dreary waste of ruined masonry; every now and then the portions of the walls still left were falling down as the ground again heaved (for there have been since the 28th repeated light shocks at intervals), and all the remains are in a most tottering and dangerous condition. On the shore and among the ruins wandered the rare survivors; old women of 90 and upwards; here and there a man looking about helplessly to find the place he had lived in; young girls looking dazed and stupid—all tearless and, as it were, unable to understand what had befallen them. One said, I have lost my whole family; another, I cannot find mother. Others again were holding tight some trifle seized in escaping, the last thing left them, as if it was a child. They accepted food offered them mechanically. One woman, carrying an empty bottle under her arm, took a glass of wine held out to her, but seemed incapable of putting it to her lips, or of speaking. So her bottle was filled and returned to her, whereupon she drank a little out of it. We were talking to Signor Genala when news came to him that voices had been heard under the ruins of what had been the upper Piazza or Square of Casamicciola. So we all hastened after him in that direction. It was literally scrambling and climbing over rough fragments of buildings, rather than walking, with here and there a flying leap over a ghastly fissure in the ground. Now and then the horrible stench, about which Italian papers have said so much, made itself sensible, and we had to smell little bottles of phenic acid we carried. Soldiers were removing bodies here and there for burial, and hands or feet were seen protruding as they dug amongst the ruins. We came to a very dangerous place, where guards were stationed to prevent people passing, but to go round in another direction would waste valuable time. So the Minister insisted. "At your own peril, then," said the guard; and we hurried one at a time past a tottering wall, jumping from one stone to another with what courage we could muster. At last we came to what was once the piazza, and stayed there during the long eight hours it took to extricate two men who had been buried for four long long days and nights. It was a day never to be forgotten by anyone present. The two poor fellows, young men of 17 and 18, were under a heap of ruins on a ground floor, buried beneath the whole remains of the house. A photograph of this particular spot had been taken the day before. The men buried underneath heard the voices above them, and called out as loudly as they could, in vain. At daybreak next day the brother of one of them went to the place to search for the body of their father, who had perished there. After digging for some time he heard a voice below, and rushed off down to the shore for help. A detachment of engineers went up immediately, followed by Signor Genala, the Minister of Public Works, accompanied also by the Roman correspondents of the Times and Daily News, who were present during the whole of the painfully interesting proceedings. They soon saw the first of the youths emerge from below; first his arms, then his head and shoulders. Covered with dust, and staring wildly round, he clung to those who helped him out, unable to articulate, his tongue literally cleaving to his palate with thirst. Restoratives being carefully administered, he was at length able to speak, and said there were two more down there, one living, the other dead. He and his surviving companion had kept themselves alive with some tomatoes and vinegar they had been able to reach. This man recovered his strength rapidly, and even insisted upon walking part of the way down to the seashore. The next thing was to find out exactly where the second man was. In reply to questions shouted at an opening a voice was heard faintly far within. By degrees the spot was approached, the soldiers and officers and all present working with their hands to clear away the rubbish, for there was risk in using even the spades and pickaxes, lest the threatening masses around should fall and crush the poor creature to death. After nearly two hours' labour it was possible to distinguish what he said. One of his legs was fast under a beam. Bits of ice and some restoratives were passed to him, and phenic acid was poured about to counteract the stench from the corpse lying close to him, and which was so noxious that a carbineer, who stooped down into the hole when first opened, fainted and had to be dragged out again by the feet. At last this poor man also was rescued unhurt bodily, but in a still more reduced state than the first. He was carried to the steamer and taken across to one of the hospitals at Naples.

The conduct and energy of the Italian officers and soldiers are beyond all praise, and when the long anxious task was at last crowned with success, we were all overcome with an emotion impossible to describe. It was a blazing hot day. The soldiers worked in relays, and were supplied with food and wine at intervals. Much has been said about the way the governing powers lost their heads and lost time before this terrible disaster, but at the disinterment of our two men nothing was wanting but a saw, when the extrication of the second man seemed impossible, from the way his foot was wedged under a beam it was destruction to move. A soldier had to be sent down to the landing-place for one, and waiting for it was a time of suspense. I took shelter from the sun for a while in a portion of a room still standing, and found stuck upon the wall there a rude print of the Madonna delle Grazie, which I took away as a remembrance, as well as an egg, which I did not succeed in blowing. It was after 5 o'clock in the afternoon when we got back to the seashore, and looked for the telegraph-office, which was in a very tumble-down state, but the wires still uninterrupted. Our despatches were written on the end of an empty barrel, and we rested on one or two broken chairs until the return steamer to Naples was ready to start. We were all on board and waiting when the helmsman discovered that the bussola (compass) did not work. There was a great deal of fuss and talk about this, as there is about everything amongst the Neapolitans, and one passenger got very nervous about starting, although the night was calm and clear. At last we steamed off, and got safe back to Naples, after a day never to be forgotten.

This awful catastrophe did not come without warning. Not only was there a slight shock on the 22nd, but the water in the wells disappeared—always a sign of earthquake—and two small chimneys, as they are called, of the long quiet volcano of Mount Epomeo emitted more smoke than usual. But people seem to lose apprehension by custom, and there is the old metaphor for heedlessness of "playing at the volcano's mouth." Poor Casamicciola was full of sojourners from Rome, and other places who had gone there for health and refreshment from the summer heats. There were also many foreigners, a few English and Americans, some of whom perished. Amongst others, the pianist, Mr. Llewellyn Strune, who was sitting at the piano when he was suddenly crushed to death. He was found with his hands still on the keys of the instrument. There were some wonderful escapes. All who were at the wooden theatre were saved, although it went on fire, and there were bruises and hurts. One lady had time to tie her baby between two pillows, and drop the bundle from the window, letting herself down afterwards as deliberately as she could. She was not much hurt. In more than one instance a whole family went to the theatre from the persistent entreaties of a young child, and thus were saved. Mr. Barff, the English chaplain at Naples, lost one of his children, but his wife and the others were saved. It is noticeable that a young playfellow—a little girl, who had come to spend some time with them—insisted, without being able to give any reason, upon being sent home to Castellammare, the day before the earthquake. Amongst the Romans who perished were the wife and two children of Signor Blumenstil, the Director of the Acqua Marcia Water Company. Two of his sons escaped with their tutor in the following manner. They had retired to rest shortly before 9 o'clock, and the tutor writes that he had fallen soundly asleep, when he was suddenly awakened by a frightful explosion. He felt his bed violently shaken, all the furniture in the room was overturned, the windows broken; the subterraneous rumbling, the hundreds of falling houses, produced a noise louder than thunder—all this in less than 10 seconds. He jumped up and got into the next room, where he found his pupils—boys of 13 and 16—still unhurt. Then he looked for the room in which were Madame Blumenstil and her two little girls, but found only empty space! The room had gone down, and there was before him a heap of ruins and clouds of dust. He rushed back to the boys, shutting the doors to keep out the dust which was filling their rooms. One of the boys found matches and struck a light, but could not find a candle. The tutor fortunately found a lamp, which he lighted, and then a jug still holding some water; they dipped their handkerchiefs in it, and held them to their mouths and noses to prevent the dust from suffocating them. The tutor, who was a priest, told the boys to put some clothes on, while he fastened the sheets together, and tied them to the iron balcony which was still fastened to one of the windows. Then, giving them the blessing in articulo mortis, he let the boys, expert gymnasts, down one after the other, and followed himself. They reached the ground safely, and found themselves in an awful scene. At first the dust was so thick they were nearly blinded. When it cleared away a little, they saw people with torches scrambling wildly about in a heap of ruins. Their house had been a villa in a garden. They took the direction of the vineyards, and after considerable exertion reached the open ground, where, surrounded with wounded fugitives, they waited through the long hideous night for the day, every moment expecting that the ground would yawn and swallow them up, for the subterranean noises continued at intervals. Some poor wretches managed to light a fire, which only served to show the desolation around, and the bleeding wounds of many who had escaped barely with life and limb. After midnight the clouds of dust had dispersed, and the sky spread clear above them with its thousand stars. The waning moon rose, and cast her trembling rays upon this "field of grief," not even "glorious!" As the place where they had taken refuge happened to be a central point, refugees arrived from all parts of the ruined town, some in one garment only, others wrapped in sheets, others quite naked, most of them hurt or injured in some way, many bleeding. What desolation! There were mothers frantic with grief, tearing at the ruins, calling for their children, wringing their hands, pulling out their hair. Those coming from opposite points, being asked news of an hotel, a villa, or a family, invariably replied, "All in ruins, all dead!" and the screams and groans redoubled with indescribable agony. The distress of the women was especially most lamentable. It was like all that has been imagined of the Judgment Day. Some were even singing over their sorrows, and the listeners felt as if they could not live over such woe. The hours rolled slowly by; the poor priest and his pupils were more dead than alive. They clung together without a word. Great sorrows, like great joys, are speechless. When the day began to break, the narrator rose from his seat to go and survey the ruins. Looking for well-known houses, he saw only destruction. The hotel Piccola Sentinella, the Bishop's house, the church, the bath establishments, were unrecognisable heaps. One second had sufficed for all this disaster—to turn this earthly paradise into a wilderness and a grave. Towards 4 o'clock the witness of all this horror took his pupils down towards the seashore to seek an embarkation for Naples. All trace of road or path having disappeared, they had to scramble over heaps of masonry, jump across fissures, and pass walls leaning over in a falling condition. Dead bodies and wounded creatures lay on every side. Everywhere sounded the same cry of woe and bereavement. They were taken on board a steamer at 5 o'clock, half-blinded and choked with dust, confused and unable to understand the calamity that had fallen upon them, scarcely able even to be thankful at their escape with life!

King Humbert hastened to Ischia from Monza as soon as he heard of the earthquake, and spent nearly a whole day on the island, carefully visiting every part of the ruins, encouraging the soldiers to work, reminding the directors of the labours how living persons had been rescued after several days' burial on the occasion of the earthquake at Calabria towards the end of last century, and distributing relief to the survivors. His Majesty was greatly moved, and said it was much worse than a battle-field, from the awful sense of human creatures in living agony underground. Every country in Europe has shown sympathy for Italy in this fresh distress. Collections are made in most capitals for the hapless Ischians, and telegrams from various sovereigns are sent. Queen Victoria telegraphed from Osborne to King Humbert, expressing her sympathy for him; and the Admiral of the Mediterranean squadron, Lord John Hay, offered to bring his ships and men to aid the Neapolitan authorities. The captain of the Carysfort, anchored in the Bay of Naples, likewise offered his services to the Prefect. Both these offers were declined, but the King expressed his gratitude.

THE VOLCANIC DISTURBANCES IN THE STRAITS OF SUNDA.

From Nature, August 2, we learn that the volcanic disturbances in the Straits of Sunda reach back to May last. In view of the terrific loss of life and property which has since occurred the following will be read with interest:—"With reference to the volcanic eruption on Krakatan Island, off the coast of Java, brief reports of which were received by telegraph, and then noticed in Nature, the following particulars have since been received. During Sunday, May 20, and Monday, May 21, the eruption was very heavily felt at Batavia, also more or less on Tuesday, May 22; but the earthquake shocks have since ceased, although the mountain is still apparently vomiting fire and smoke. The following report is from Anjer, dated May 23, 3.47 a.m.:—'On Sunday morning last, from 6 to 10 o'clock there was a tremendous eruption, with continuous earthquakes and heavy rain of ashes. On Sunday evening and Monday morning it was continued. The eruption was distinctly seen here till 9 o'clock this morning, and smoke was seen until 12 o'clock; afterwards it cleared up a little, and at this moment the air is clouded again. Captain Ross reports from Anjer that on May 22 he was sailing near Java's first point and tried to get Prinsen Island in sight, but found that it was surrounded by clouds. Then he steered for Krakatan, but found it to be the same there. The captain observed that the lower island or mountain situated on the north side of Krakatan was totally surrounded by smoke, and from time to time flames arose with loud reports. Fire had broken out in several places, and it is very likely that the trees in the neighbourhood have caught fire. The mountain of Krakatan has been covered all over on the north side with ashes. The captain could not make out the condition of the mountain, as he kept away as far as possible, being afraid of the wind falling, and the vessel being drifted on to the island. The strongest fire was seen on the evening of May 20, with heavy explosions and detonations. The fire was also seen at that time at Anjer, but on account of the heavy smoke nothing could be perceived, as all the islands remained clouded. The captain did not experience any shower of ashes. The master of the steamer Conrad, which arrived at Batavia on May 24, reports having passed Krakatan on the north side the previous night, and met with heavy rains of ashes, covering the decks, &c., with about 1¼ inch of ashes. He also had to cut his way through nearly 1½ metres of pumice-stone, which occasioned a delay of almost five hours.'"

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

MELBOURNE, SEPT 17.

The Strong agitation does not subside. The congregation has met, and has accepted the resignation of their pastor with sorrowful regret, not unmixed with bitterness. And, out of doors, where opinions are expressed more freely than they can be in a formally-convened meeting, there is a good deal more of bitterness. But the bitterness is backed up with resolves, and those who know say that there is plenty of money ready to build for Mr. Strong a new church, and also richly to endow it. Looked at from their own point of view, the anti-Strong clerical party have reason on their side. Perhaps they might have exercised their functions with less of theological fury; but, as a matter of principle, they could not, while holding to their belief, have sanctioned Mr. Strong's proceedings, more especially in permitting his church to be used as a place for the delivery of a lecture which, plainly put, tore their dogmas into fragments, and flung them in their faces. Mr. Higinbotham's lecture was a direct challenge to them to show their strength, or what they regarded as their strength; and they have shown it; and for the present, so far as material force is concerned, they have won. But the public feeling about Mr. Strong was shown this evening at the Town Hall, when he rose to speak about the proposed working men's club. In theatrical phrase, he had a grand reception, and if some of his clerical enemies had been there they would have been groaned at, just as it has of late been the imbecile custom to groan at the actor who enacts the villain in the hyper-melodramatic plays of which we have had so many.

But touching this proposition to establish a working men's club, although it was received with enthusiasm, and although the eloquence of the speakers at the meeting was received with applause, it is open to doubt whether working men desire a club. The average working man of this part of the world is a well-to-do and wholly self-sufficient person, and he is not thankful for anything. He considers himself entitled to all that he gets, and a great deal more. He is well fed, well housed, and well clothed, and he has, if he likes to have, always money in hand, and often money in the bank. He asks for no patronage, but he will accept the patronage if it come accompanied with gifts. Thus, he will take the club and assume the management of it, if the club be given to him unconditionally. But he will not be grateful for it. He will receive it as a right, just as he has received as a right the gift of the Working Men's College. And if you were to go on giving him things for ever, you would never create in his mind any feeling beyond the conviction that as labour confers dignity, it is a privilege on the part of those who benefit him to work for his behoof. One of the difficulties in connection with this movement appears to be the question of whether the working man shall have liquor at his club. And I think the working man will not care to go to his club unless he can have both his beer and his tobacco. But I am not so clear either that he will care to go to his club even with the concession of beer. At present his chief delight, after his nominal labour is over, is to walk about the streets and occasionally drop into a public-house. There is a certain freedom in this mode of passing his time which club-life could hardly parallel. I should be glad to think that club-life were attractive to the working man, but from all that I have observed of his habits I am not so satisfied that it will be.

And, going from labour to science, it is to be set down that on Friday night the conversazione of the Royal Society took place. There were certainly no working men present on that occasion, that is to say working men as we commonly understand them. On the other hand, those who were present did not appear to have quite comprehended what was to be done at a conversazione. They did not come in evening dress. They did not dress even with exceptional attractiveness. The men came in overcoats, and the women in ulsters and hats and bonnets. They seemed to have regarded the occasion as they would have regarded an ordinary lecture. Consequently the general effect was not enlivening. I mean the effect derived from a contemplation of the visitors. Perhaps there is no abstract reason why, when people go to a conversazione, they should go in evening dress; but, upon the whole, it seems to me that it would improve the effect if they did. Apart from the costumes, however, the gathering itself was an agreeable success. Firstly, because, being for the first time at the Athenæum, and not in the hall of the society, there was room to move about; there was no jostling. And then the address—which I suppose by this time every sensible person has read—was an admirable one, and those who gave the little lectures all knew exactly what they were about, and did not weary those to whom they talked. And concerning the president, Mr. Ellery, it would be impossible to say too much. He has become the perpetual president, and it would be a misfortune for the society if he were to retire from that position. At first, after he had been several times re-elected, it was thought an unwise thing for him to occupy the position so many times; but the advantage of retaining a man who has so completely the interests of the society at heart, and who really can derive no personal benefit from the connection, is so obvious that any attempt to dislodge him would be looked upon as revolutionary. And without for a moment suggesting, or desiring to be supposed to suggest, that his scientific eminence does not give him every right to the position, there is no question that his personal qualities have done not a little to make it a certainty that he would always be re-elected; for he is, essentially, a good fellow. He is the very substance and type of geniality. He conciliates everybody with whom he comes in contact. Unless you were the very ruggedest of curmudgeons you could not help liking Ellery. You would be glad if he were knighted, or if some still more signal honour were bestowed upon him. You sigh to think there are not more men like him. He is the kind of man to whom you would be glad to raise a statue. At a public dinner in his honour you would drink his health in the most vociferous acclamation. If he were to become a candidate for legislative honours (?) you would try to persuade him not to risk his popularity, and if still he insisted upon being a candidate, you would go on his committee, and work for him night and day. We are consequently very proud of Ellery and very proud of the address he delivered, and proud of the society he has done so much to advance to a good place in the list of Victorian institutions.

And suggestively of the Legislature, the mallee is yet the principal subject they are debating. They have varied the almost continual amiability by a very little quarrel on the subject of the tenure of the blocks, that singularly pacific gentleman, Mr. Bosisto, having taken umbrage at having been taunted with desiring to play into the hands of the squatters because he desired to make the term ten years instead of five. But it was so little of a quarrel that the Premier brought everybody back to good humour by the frankest apology. As to Mr. Berry, he exploded only once, and even then he laughed at himself, at the absurdity of exploding in a House where nobody is afraid of explosions. To relieve his mind, however, which must have something upon which to exercise its active cravings for excitement, he has taken to the subject of gaols. He wants to get rid of the Melbourne gaol, and he wants to send the prisoners into the country where they can have fresh air, agreeable exercise, and unlimited intellectual occupation. Mr. Castieau, the inspector, thinks they can be better employed at Pentridge, but he thinks that he will want £35,000 to provide for them, especially the women. Mr. Berry thinks he knows better than Mr. Castieau, and as Mr. Berry can do as he likes, and Mr. Castieau cannot, it appears as if Mr. Berry's projects had the greater prospect of being carried out.

As a matter of course, we are still considering the subject of Prince's Bridge, and, as the southern suburban councils do not appear to be willing to contribute their allotted share towards the cost of the new structure, it is announced that the commencement of the bridge is postponed indefinitely. But the temporary bridge is certainly to be put up, and we shall consequently have some kind of a beginning shortly in progress.

The question about Prince's Bridge, it will be observed, continually comes up for consideration. It may be introduced parenthetically, and then dropped, but it will always be sure to come up again. Meanwhile, the time is enlivened with less permanent topics, among which just now is Mandeville. Mandeville has been for several years the commander of our navy. He began to reign when Panter was deposed, and he has reigned ever since. But now that a new naval king is shortly to arise, Mandeville is to reign no longer, and the question is what is to be done with Mandeville? His friend Berry thinks he might be made Inspector of Charities, and Mandeville it seems is quite willing to inspect them. But the newspapers object to the translation, and the chances are that Mandeville will shortly be officially nowhere. He will be sure to find a place somewhere and somehow.

Burglary is just now very active, and burglars are doing well. It is clearly a paying occupation, the new arrangements in the police force notwithstanding. A good many people are obviously taking to this line of business, for it requires no capital, its results are very profitable, and moreover it is safe.

A PICNIC ON THE LALOKI, NEW GUINEA.

(Contributed, by a recent Visitor, to the Brisbane Courier.)

A picnic having been arranged on horseback to the Laloki, a distance of 14 miles from Port Moresby, we—that is, Mr. and Mrs. Lawes, with their son Charley, Mr. Chalmers, and myself—one fine morning, about 9 o'clock, accompanied by Ruatoka, the native teacher located in Port Moresby, and by Peter, native boatman, on horseback, and followed and preceded by numbers of native men, boys, and girls on foot, some of them carrying provisions, tents, blankets, and the other impedimenta of travelling in this country, started in high spirits; and after climbing the hill overlooking the village and traversing an extensive plain, at one point intersected by a small stream, at places breaking out into deep waterholes, arrived about 1 o'clock at the River Laloki. Upon nearing the river we found the ground covered by tracks of pigs, some evidently of large size, while the soil in all soft places was rooted up by their snouts, showing the immense number of these animals which run wild here. These pigs are not of the European breed, either in colour or form. In colour, when young, they resemble no species of pigs with which I am acquainted, being black and brown in alternate longitudinal stripes extending their entire length, their legs not so long as we have seen in the South Sea Island pigs, and their height not exceeding from 1 foot to 18 inches. When getting full grown they lose the longitudinal striping, and become a rusty black. The boars are savage animals, with immense tusks, and do not for a moment hesitate to charge viciously at any person who ventures to interfere with them, and woe betide the unfortunate who is not in time or sufficiently active to escape their charge. The tusks of the boars are highly valued by the New Guineans, not only as tokens of their prowess in chase, but as furnishing means for the adornment of their persons—as they understand the phrase.

The country travelled over between Port Moresby and the Laloki bears a very great resemblance to the coast country in Queensland, except in the total absence of the hills and valleys of sand which form such a marked and almost invariable feature in the vicinity of the Australian coast; but take the Australian coast at say five miles back, and there the likeness to this country is perfect. There is the same description of coarse grass, mostly kangaroo, blady, and spear grass, and among the trees which covered the open forest country the eucalyptus of various species predominated. One sort greatly resembled what we Queenslanders call the Cyprus gum, both in its stem and bark, but has a larger and darker coloured leaf, and is certainly a variety which I have not seen before. On this plain were numbers of wallaby, which started out of the long grass, and one of which our followers succeeded in knocking over, and which, in its legitimate form of kangaroo soup, lent a seasonable feature to our evening meal. Of kangaroo, as we understand the term, I saw none, and do not think, from all I have heard, that they are to be found in New Guinea, which, however, possesses two varieties of wallaby, which I have not seen here. Upon our arrival at the Laloki, and after horses had been unsaddled, watered, and tethered (for here our Queensland system of hobbling out does not appear to find favour), we pitched camp, lit fires, slung the billies, had dinner, and afterwards a siesta and a swim in the river, which was running strongly, and in one or two places just fordable, in others running in a clear deep stream over a gravelly bed. Gold undoubtedly exists in the river, for the Queensland pioneers found it, and I have now half a pennyweight of scaly gold got there by one of them and given to me. We were on the old camping ground of the hardy pioneers. All the familiar debris of an old camp were around us in the form of old jam tins, sardine cases, fragments of boots, shoes, straps, and saddles, and, saddest of all, three graves, marked at head and foot by the wooden cross, which the rude but practical piety of the digger teaches him always to erect over the last resting-place of a comrade. I looked long and anxiously but could see nothing which, in my judgment, would indicate the existence of gold in any quantity. A little above the place where we struck it the stream breaks into two heads. One, the left, looking upwards, is speedily lost in an almost impenetrable scrub, extending for miles on each side of it; and it was in trying to cut through and penetrate this that the pioneers contracted the fever, which proved fatal to so many of them. The right-hand branch was away towards the base and back of the Astrolabe, and in running this branch up the diggers discovered a magnificent fall, where the river precipitates itself over a cliff 150 feet high. This branch is comparatively free from scrub, but is so hemmed in by cliffs and ridges that it soon becomes difficult, if not impracticable, to follow it. In the evening Ruatoka, Peter, and I went shooting, and returned shortly before sundown with a couple of goura pigeons, a fruit pigeon, a pig, and several wallabies. These goura pigeons are splendid birds, as large as a full-grown scrub turkey, and with heads adorned with a magnificent crest as large as one's hand. Their flavour is delicate and their flesh tender. The fruit pigeon is also a fine bird, about twice the size of a bronzewing, and of handsome plumage and excellent flavour. There being now abundance of food in camp, all of the natives, as well as ourselves, had a grand-blow out. I had forgotten to say that, besides our own natives, we had been followed by several men, natives of the village, who availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the neighbourhood of the Laloki, and collect the vine with which, as I have before stated, they bind together their fences. The reason for their following was that this vine grows in great abundance about the Laloki, and this river being within the territory of another tribe—the Coareans—they would would not have dared to venture there without our support and protection. However, there was enough and to spare for all, and they all availed themselves of the opportunity, which does not occur to them frequently, of having a square meal of kangaroo and pig. Afterwards native service was held by the teacher, Ruatoka, and it was very pleasant to listen to the choruses of the native hymns echoing through the woods. Soon after, tired with our long day's work, we all wrapped ourselves in our blankets (at least those who had them), and slept the sleep of the just until morning, undisturbed by mosquitoes, sandflies, or any other nuisances. Early next morning I went with Ruatoka this time down the river, through thick, but not extensive, scrub, eager to see, and if possible shoot, a bird of paradise, which are said to be pretty numerous here. However, neither event came off, and we were obliged to content ourselves with a couple of pigeons, a wallaby, and a pig. Getting back for breakfast we had our meal, and the natives another gorge. In a couple of hours after all hands went for a bathe in a shallow part of the stream, and the fun the natives had, tumbling about themselves and us, and trying to roll us into deep water, and hold us down, all done with the utmost good humour, I shall endeavour to describe in another article. Soon after luncheon we saddled up, the natives shouldered their loads—this time greatly increased by huge rolls of the vine I have spoken of—and started for the port, where we arrived safe and sound about sundown. All the country between a couple of miles beyond Port Moresby and the Laloki is the hunting-ground of the Motu and Keri Tabuan tribes. It is not cultivated—indeed, is not suitable for such a purpose, and is well adapted for a cattle station, as there is plenty of grass and water, and enough high ground to which cattle could betake themselves in heavy rains or flood time. I am not able to say whether the natives would entertain such an idea, but think an arrangement might be possible, though exceedingly difficult, owing to the number of interests involved. The Motu and Keri Tabuan tribes must number many hundred males, and all would claim an individual right to some portion of the hunting ground. The river and adjoining country is the property of the Coaren tribe. I did not see many of these, but those I did see appeared to be a fine athletic race of men—perhaps not quite so robust as the Motus, yet lithe and agile, and quite able to hold their own against all comers. Teachers were at one time stationed in their villages, and were removed, I believe, owing to the urgent want for their presence elsewhere, and also to the fact that fever was found to be very prevalent near the mountains. They are most anxious that teachers should be sent to them again, and Mr. Lawes hopes soon to be in a position to comply with their request.

IRRIGATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I notice in Mr. Christie's letter, dated the 15th instant, published in your issue of to-day, that he makes the following statement:—"But all this is over months ago, and I am now writing on the water question—a question on which, at least, Mr. Gipps is supposed to be somewhat familiar, as much on account of the notoriety to which he attained in his advocacy of the Kenny Hill scheme as on account of that masterpiece of hydraulic experiment, his attempt to lead the waters of one of our southern rivers over a spur of the Kiandra Ranges in an open conduit for sluicing purposes." This is clearly a statement in reference to the carrying out of works entrusted to Mr. Gipps as the mining engineer of the Golden Crown Hydraulic Sluicing Company, Kiandra, and as it is calculated very much to injure him, and is altogether unfounded, I take the earliest opportunity of contradicting it point blank. Mr. Gipps made no failing in the works referred to, and so far as we can judge from the experience which we have had, they have been wholly efficient. It is true that at the outset of Mr. Gipps' operations he intended to bring water on to the mine from a point situated at a greater distance from it than where he eventually brought it from. The former project was abandoned temporarily, for the sole reason that it was found that sufficient water could be brought on to the mine from the nearer source; but all this goes to show that Mr. Christie has only taken the trouble to make himself half acquainted with the facts, and has made the unfounded imputation referred to against Mr. Gipps. I am, &c.,

THE CHURCH SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the St. John's (Darlinghurst) Auxiliary to the Church Society was held on Monday evening last in the parish schoolroom. The incumbent (the Rev. A. W. Pain) presided, and after opening the meeting with prayer, he spoke from personal experience of the good work carried on by the society in country parishes.

Mr. H. E. A. ALLAN, the treasurer, submitted a statement, showing that the auxiliary had last year contributed £535 to the parent society. This was the largest amount it had as yet subscribed, and the increase he attributed in a large measure to the efforts of the lady collectors. He trusted that as the parish increased there would be a relative increase in the support given by the auxiliary. It gave him pleasure to state that Mr. F. H. Dangar had again contributed £100, and that Mr. Richard Jones had that morning given him £40 for the society.

The Very Rev. the VICAR-GENERAL moved the first resolution—"That this meeting pledges itself that a strenuous efforts shall be made to induce all the members of the church in this parish to become subscribers to the parent society"—and in doing so dealt in an exhaustive and earnest way with the general features of the society's work as detailed in the annual report. He felt, he said, that there could be no more suitable or valuable means for the extension of the Church than the society which had now existed in the diocese for 27 years. There were few parishes that were not indebted to the society for assistance at some time or other. Many again could not support a clergyman at this present moment except for the grant made by the society. The importance of the society's work was, he felt, not generally understood nor fully realised, otherwise a more general support would be given it by members of the Church. He called attention to the items of expenditure under the head of passage money for clergymen to the diocese, and explained that it was necessary so long as the young men of the colony refrained from joining the ministry. He regretted that there were so few candidates for holy orders from the University at the present moment. So long as the youth of the country held back, the diocese could not do otherwise than look to the mother country for a supply of clergy. He concluded by urging those present not to relax their efforts, as the calls upon the society were increasing in every direction.

The Rev. S. S. TOVEY (organising secretary), in seconding the resolution, remarked how intimately connected the work of the society was with the material prosperity and development of the colony as shown, for example, in the appointment of a catechist to labour amongst the men at the works of the Sydney Water Supply Company, and in an application now before the committee for a grant towards the stipend of a clergyman to work amongst the navvies constructing the line of railway from Sydney to Newcastle. In this respect and in others the society maintained its claim to be the Home Mission. He wished, especially before the members of that auxiliary, to refer to the opposition which the society encountered. It might surprise them, perhaps, to hear that there was any hostility to work which had so simple and single an aim. But he could tell them of two forces at work in the diocese against which the society had to contend. The one was parochial selfishness, the other he would venture to call parochial pauperisation. It was parochial selfishness that the society struggled to overcome—the spirit of "beadledom," if he might call it so, which cried the parish first in everything, the diocese least and last. A higher and broader spirit should animate churchmen than that which obtained in political circles. There, they well knew, too often local interests, such as a bridge to be constructed, or the route of some railway to be deviated, animated electors in the choice of representatives; national and imperial interests were a secondary consideration. He contended that side by side with parochial interests the claims of the diocese as a whole should be considered, and not be wholly ignored as they had been in some parishes during the past year. There was no parish so poor or so struggling in the diocese that it could not afford to have a collection in its church once a year, at least, in aid of the society. What, he asked, would probably have been the position of the Church in this, the primatial see, to-day if this spirit had dominated in the past? They knew they were daily expecting to hear of the appointment of their third bishop, metropolitan and primate. Looking back to the year 1836, when their first bishop, properly speaking, was appointed, what did they see? Prior to that date the country formed part of the See of Calcutta. All the clergy heard of their bishop—for they never saw him—was his charge, which once a year was read in St. James' Church, and which, owing to its length was considerately divided, one half being delivered after the morning service, and the remainder in the afternoon. In 1836, when Bishop Broughton was appointed, there were nine churches, eight chapels, and some 14 clergy in the whole of Australia; there was too, the foundation stone of the cathedral, which had been laid since 1819. Now, what would the third bishop find on his arrival? He would find in this diocese alone 100 licensed clergymen, 188 buildings for divine worship, and no longer one diocese, but 12 complete dioceses; and last, though not least, a cathedral erected at a cost of £60,000, which would do credit to any modern see in England, and which was at once a monument to parochial uselessness in the past, and a protest against a contrary spirit. He (the speaker) maintained that these results could never have been obtained if in the past the parishes had ignored diocesan claims as represented by the Church Society. The other foe they had to watch against was any tendency to pauperise parishes. It rested with the society to see to this. It was a failing recognised as common to our poor humanity that men would not do for themselves what they could get others to do for them; and it was with parishes very much as with individuals. They had woke up, too, in this 19th century to inquire what constituted true benevolence, and to recognise that there was a charity which was unthinking and pernicious in its effects alike on the donor and the recipient. The speaker urged that it devolved on the society, as the guardian of diocesan funds, to educate the parishes to sound views on these matters; and, to his mind, the rule reducing grants each year by 10 per cent. was, subject to exceptions, a healthy and a protective one.

On the motion of the Rev. Canon KING, seconded by the Rev. A. C. CORLETTE, the following were appointed office-bearers for the current year:—President, the Rev. A. W. Pain, B.A.; secretary and treasurer, Mr. H. E. A. Allan; representatives, Mr. Robert Hills, Dr. Kyngdon; committee, Messrs. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., F. H. Dangar, R. Hills, J. Scroggie, P. B. Walker, P. N. Trebeck, J. F. Hoile, R. Jones, J. R. Street, W. Speer, B. Kyngdon, E. J. H. Knapp, S. Merrick, C. Dolohery, M. Metcalfe, R. G. Higgins, E. Campbell, H. E. A. Allan.

Mr. Allan announced that the collection in the room had reached £270.

The meeting closed by the Vicar-General pronouncing the Benediction.

SYDNEY AT THE FISHERIES EXHIBITION.

In a scientific review, entitled "Zoology at the Fisheries Exhibition," contributed by Mr. Henry J. Giglioli to Nature (August 2), and to which the editor gives the first place in the issue, we find the following:—The strange and uncouth Sirenia are represented by a grand specimen, one of the principal attractions to every naturalist in the entire Exhibition, the nearly complete skeleton of a Rhytina Stelleri, which, with other bones of that most interesting creature is exhibited by Baron Nordenskjöld, one of the many grand results of the Vega expedition; the National Museum of Washington shows a very fine skull of that peculiar, rare, and extinct Sirenoid. Very interesting, and more noticed by the general public, are the two fine mounted specimens, male and female, of the Dugong (Halicore australis), exhibited by the Australian Museum of Sydney. New South Wales (the Australian Museum of Sydney) has one of the very best ichthyological exhibits; besides very beautifully mounted specimens, and very well preserved alcoholic ones, a set of splendid coloured drawings from nature and of natural size, and a large series of photographs of fish are exhibited. Most of the remarkable forms and of the peculiar species of the fish-fauna of Australia are represented. I may specially mention those living fossils Ceratodus and Cestracion, both represented by two species, the former C. Forsteri and C. miolepis, the latter C. Philippii and C. galeatus; Ceratodus miolepis, exhibited in a dry skin, is the companion specimen to the type. Amongst others of the many interesting species exhibited may be mentioned Galeocerdo Rayneri, Carcharodon Rondeletii, Crossorhinus barbatus, Rhinobatis granulosus, Odontaspis taurus, Trygonorhina fasciata, Myliobatis australis, Rhina squatina, Temnodon saltator, the singular Glaucosoma, with its mussel-like opercular appendage, &c. Some of the freshwater food-fish, as Oligorus, Ctenolabrus, and Therapon, are noticeable. A remarkable sun-fish is also exhibited; it differs from our species in shape, in the size and form of the caudal rays, and lastly in being covered with small carinate horny scales, which appear to cover the osseous granulations of the dermis; I am inclined to think that it differs from our O. mola, belongs to the southern hemisphere, and if so, might go by the name of Orthragoriscus Ramsayi, as a just acknowledgment to Mr. E. P. Ramsay, curator of the Australian Museum, who brought it over, and to whose intelligence and activity the splendid exhibit of the New South Wales Court is entirely due.

LAND ALIENATION AND SETTLEMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—From the report of a portion of the speech delivered by me at Tumut, it might be inferred that there were only 328 conditional purchases made from the year 1862 to the present time in that district. I desire to state that the numbers 328 were those selections made within the period stated, which had never been transferred by the original selectors. The list of selections made in each year from 1862 to 1880 given by me were the selections in each year which had never changed ownership. I quoted this large number to show the bona fides of the settlement in the Tumut district, for I could readily select land districts in the colony where thousands more acres of land were selected since the passing of the land laws in 1862 than in the Tumut district, a dozen of which selections have not remained in the hands of the original selectors. I am, &c.,

STRATHDON at Burwood is in every way a first-class residential villa. The garden is pretty and in complete order. The house is in perfect order throughout, and the purchaser can enter on possession without expending a shilling. It contains verandah, handsome hall, noble drawing-room and dining-room, lofty, and connected with folding doors, three capital bedrooms, servant's room, nice kitchen, scullery, pantry, &c., &c. Gas and fittings throughout, marble mantelpieces, large water supply. Strathdon will be sold at auction by Hardie and Gordon, at their rooms, on Wednesday, 26th September, in consequence of the present owner and resident having to go to England. Inspection is invited.—[ADVT.]

The CAUSATION of TYPHOID FEVER, &c.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have discussed this subject at much greater length than I at first intended, my object being not only to arouse the attention of the public, but likewise to enlist the interest of my professional brethren in what I considered the inadequacy of current doctrines or theories on the subject of the causation of this and other allied diseases to explain, or rather account, for the facts as they actually occur in modern outbreaks of such diseases, especially in these colonies—in other words, to the fallacy of ascribing such outbreaks, whether in town or country, to contagion, on the one hand, from the bowels of a person affected by the disease getting into the alimentary canal of a healthy person through food or drink, especially water, or into his system through the lungs by breathing an atmosphere tainted by such "specific" discharges, in the shape of sewer gas or emanations from cesspits, or soil sodden with water or other fluids containing such so-called specific poison; or, on the other hand, by a specific poison generated by decaying fæcal or other organic matter, vegetable or animal, getting access to the system by the same media—with a view to further systematic observation and inquiry into the whole subject. Now, that I have to some extent at least gained my object—for I believe that the matter is, at all events, to be discussed by the medical profession in a formal manner—a few words of explanation are due by me to both the profession and the public before finally taking leave of the subject in the public press. To the profession I must apologise for what may appear at first sight a want of due appreciation of the earlier labours in this extensive field of inquiry, connected as it is, with some of the highest speculations of the human mind, and, more especially, the labours of such men as Pasteur, Burdon Sanderson, Lister, Klebs, &c., &c., in our own day; and to the public generally, perhaps, for not having enlightened them sufficiently on the supposed, if not actual, philosophic bearings, of this apparently simple inquiry—the real or accidental connection with which, has converted in my opinion a comparatively easy problem to solve, when disentangled of such complications, into one of great perplexity. To the medical profession I say, then, that I yield to no one in respect and admiration of those labours, or in a belief that such labours will ultimately be fruitful of great results; and, to the general public, that while I cannot enter at any length on subjects which have occupied the mind of the philanthropic thinker in almost every age, and in no age more earnestly than our own, I will drop a few remarks, and give a few quotations from Sir Joseph Fayrer's work before referred to—which is a perfect mine of information and food for thought—which to those who have studied my letter will suffice to show the drift of the discussion, and by showing them more clearly the questions at issue, stimulate them, I hope, to the work, which is at present most needed, and which all of us, professional and lay, are competent to perform, viz., to observe facts as they occur before our own eyes, and leave to others the higher scientific task of analysing those facts, and building upon such analyses the generalisations of science. Let me say here, then, that we know malaria only by its effects, and we call it malaria to hide our ignorance of its real nature, notwithstanding that the youngest member of the profession will show us under the microscope, and even project it magnified on a screen, the bacillus malariæ, the supposed (by some) parasite or germ that causes the periodic or malarial fevers, such as intermittent fever, or ague, remittent fever, &c. In like manner when he points to the micro-organism, which is supposed by some to cause what are known as the continued fevers, such as typhoid, typhus, relapsing fevers, &c., we can only say, at best, that, independent altogether of the many circumstances—a few of which only I mentioned in a previous letter—which are so difficult to reconcile with a parasitic origin of disease, we can only, at best, give the Scotch verdict of "Not proven" in the matter. There is as much reason for the belief that the germs are the products of the disease as that they are the cause of it. "Our attitude," says Sir Joseph Frazer in his "Croonian Lectures, on the Climate and Fevers of India," delivered before the Royal College of Physicians of England, "for the present with respect to this point, much as we may wish that it should prove all true, must be one of reserve." The process of reasoning by which we have arrived at our present conclusions seems to have been one of deduction—that is, reasoning from the premises to the facts, in order to arrive at a foregone conclusion, instead of from the facts to the premises, from the greater to the less; or instead of, as in the inductive process, from the lesser to the greater. A principle or hypothesis is assumed or invented to help us to attain, if not to the whole truth, at least to an approximation to it. Before we can advance further, we must proceed by induction, we must critically examine and collate the old "facts" (?), real or imaginary, collect other facts, and then we must proceed to a larger generalisation, find a more photoscopic and comprehensive theory, such an one as will cover the whole of the ascertained facts, and consolidate the whole into a system of harmonious truth. The tendency of modern pathology is to refer the whole of the phenomena of disease to the ordinary laws which regulate health and decay in the organic world, if not indeed to the ordinary physical laws which govern all forms of matter, organic or inorganic, the distinction between which forms of matter being only temporary and provisional.

The distinction between the periodic or malarial fevers and the zymotic or continued fevers are only, in a very general sense correct. In practice we find the members of the two classes of fevers mentioned above, frequently merge into each other, so that it is impossible always to draw clear line of demarcation between them. For example, a malarial fever may begin as ague or periodic fever, and end as continued fever, and this applies more especially to the behaviour of the members of the two groups among themselves; and periodicity is a character common to all fevers. They do not, in other words, present "an unvarying type" in all cases; or, in the language of the germists, or those who believe in a separate specific germ or poison for each of those diseases, they do not "breed true;" like does not, in the case of "specific" (?) fevers, produce like. "It has long been my impression," says Sir Joseph Fayrer, "that the various forms of fever are closely allied to each other etiologically, and that a combination of climatic and local causes, acting on individuals of certain age, race, and personal susceptibility, accounts for the difference in the their processes that are set up. . . . It would seem that the initial process of fever being set up the course and result are determined by individual peculiarity, and by the general nature of the surroundings, rather than by any one specific cause." As to causation, &c., I quote, in addition to the above, the following passage:—"It is thought by some of considerable experience that the present nosological arrangement of fevers needs some modification as regards their etiological relations in India and the tropics, and that sufficient importance has hardly been attached to the effects of geographical position, climate, and endemic influence, in determining and modifying these characters. . . . Health and disease are so greatly influenced by the locality, nature of the soil, and its vegetation, the temperature and its fluctuations, the quantity and seasonal distribution of the rainfall, atmospheric and other meteorological changes, that some reference to them seems a fitting introduction to the study of the fevers themselves; for though this is true of all diseases, it is peculiarly so of fever." Among the views mentioned by Sir Joseph held by men who find it difficult to reconcile the phenomena and facts with the operation of a specific germ or poison is the autogenetic production of the poison in the patient's own body, advocated by Dr. Morton, of Sydney, in a pamphlet, a copy of which he has kindly sent me, and Sir Joseph Fayrer mentions this as a possible cause. I am not vain enough to theorise on this difficult subject myself, and have only mentioned malaria and climatic and other local causes, because these have been forced upon me as causes by my own experience in more than one field of observation. I hope the forthcoming discussion will be conducted solely in the interests of truth, without regard to theories—in a spirit as far removed from a love of innovation on the one hand, as a blind, unreasoning adherence to the doctrines in which we may have been educated on the other. The discussion should be, I think, confined to the facts observed in this country and others similarly situated as to climate, &c., and, as far as possible, those facts should be verified by more than one observer.

PHALÆNOPSIS SCHILLERIANA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My attention having been drawn to the above plant through a notice which appeared in your issue of Saturday last, I, like many others, paid a visit to the establishment of Messrs. Graham and Co., in the George-street markets, for the purpose of gratifying myself by seeing this very beautiful and rare orchid.

Judging from the numerous commendations I heard, I am quite sure that a great number, like myself, felt grateful to Captain Broomfield for allowing so handsome, valuable, and scarce a plant to leave his place for the purpose of pleasing many who otherwise might never see any of those beautiful plants which, I am told, grace his conservatory.

I very much regret that there should be so apparent a lack of public interest in exhibiting horticultural productions at exhibitions in this colony. In the old country horticulturists and floriculturists think little of sending plants, &c., hundreds of miles for the purposes of competition and rivalry. I have just read of a Mr. Warner forwarding from London to St. Petersburg a plant of the above, with no less than 120 fully expanded blossoms, each measuring 2½ inches across. I might here state that these plants are found growing in Java, Borneo, Sumatra, and the Burmese Territory; consequently they require a high temperature to grow in. The one under consideration is a native of Manilla, and is said to be the finest in cultivation. With proper appliances they are of easy management and produce their gorgeous flowers during the greater part of the year. Mr. Williams, in his "Orchid Manual," states that he has exhibited the same plant (p. grandiflora) for seven years, and at six exhibitions in each year. I am, &c.,

Sterne is one of the English writers who are as much honoured in the literary circles of France as in the country of their birth, and his admirers across the Channel are preparing an édition de luxe of his "Sentimental Journey" which will throw into the shade all the similar editions which have been produced in England. Two hundred copies will be struck off, and the price of subscription will be fixed according to the size of the paper, at three hundred or five hundred francs. The special character of this edition lies in the fact that each copy will contain a unique water-colour by M. Maurice Leloir on a different subject.

HOW THE FRENCH GOT INTO TONQUIN.

War is the harbinger of knowledge, if not of peace and commerce. The first intertribal conflict of which tradition has made any note may be cited in proof, and also every invasion which has taken place since, down to the troubles of France in relation to Yunnan, Tonquin, and Anam. It is, perhaps, not so much the magnitude of this Franco-Tonquinese imbroglio that has arrested the attention of the civilised world as the peculiarity of it. As yet, of course, no one can foresee what its ramifications may become, how many and how large the interests which it may involve, especially if France persists in carrying on the contest until victory is here, or until she is so completely baffled that she must withdraw, humbled if not defeated. Unfortunately she cannot pursue her purposes, whatever they may be, in spite of Chinese opposition, which may yet show a strong front, without dragging into the quarrel more or less every country now doing trade in Chinese waters. How clearly this is likely to be the case may be seen from a graphic narration of the history of French interests in the countries named above, given in the oldest of the Quarterlies. In this case, as in nearly all other attempts of the French people to create a colony, or to enter upon trade with distant countries, attempts at military conquest have been curiously mixed up with private commercial enterprise. And, since nothing succeeds like success, when one of these attempts has succeeded, its promoters have been deemed to be more or less patriotic men and worthy of notice, as in the case of Dupuis, now in France, waiting, perhaps in vain, for a recognition of his services in Tonquin; but if it fails, as in the case of the Marquis de Rays, then the promoters may be impeached for all the errors and faults of a futile expedition. For many years past France has had a footing on the southern part of the Indo-China Peninsula. Her residence there has been anything but a success, if we may believe the latest story by a lady traveller. Miss Isabella Bird, whose chatty papers on the "Golden Chersonese" have appeared in some of the periodicals, and are now reproduced in a volume, says:—

"On my weary way I was overtaken by a young French artillery officer who was eloquent on the miseries of Saigon. It is a very important military station, and a sort of depot for the convicts who are sent to the comparatively adjacent settlement of New Caledonia. A large force of infantry and artillery is always in barracks here, but it is a most sickly station. At times 40 per cent. of this force is in hospital from climatic diseases, and the number of men invalided home by every mail steamer, and the frequent changes necessary, make Saigon a very costly post. The French don't appear to be successful colonists. I do not envy the French their colony. According to my information Europeans cannot be acclimatised, and most of the children born of white parents die shortly after birth. The shores of the sea and of the rivers are scourged by severe intermittent fevers, and the whole of the colony by dysentery, which among Europeans is particularly fatal."

Quite unintentionally, as we may suppose, Miss Bird here tells the history of a good deal of French colonisation. France's distant outposts are not used, strictly speaking, for the ordinary purposes of colonisation; they are military stations and depots for political or criminal convicts. M. Dupuis, named above, was at one time of his busy life a bustling man of business at Hankow. During his residence in that city he did two things—he made himself master of the Chinese language, and identified himself closely with Chinese interests. Such men make their opportunities to be useful or mischievous, and Dupuis soon made his. In the great province of Yunnan, which lies north-west of the province of Tonquin, there occurred a rebellion, not an usual event in the south-west parts of China and its vicinity. To put down this rebellion as promptly as possible was the desire of the Imperial authorities. Dupuis conceived the idea that the River Songcoi, or Songkai, which takes its rise in the Yunnan territory, and debouches into the Gulf of Tonquin, might be navigable, and if so it would be the shortest route for the conveyance of arms and ammunition to Yunnan, and might thereafter become a highway for trade. In the treble capacity of explorer, merchant, and mandarin he visited Yunnan, and from thence proceeded to explore the upper part of the Songcoi River as far down southward as Hanoi. Finding it navigable so far he not unnaturally supposed that the lower part of it, nearest to the Gulf of Tonquin, might be still more easily navigated. At this time the Mohammedan rebellion was not crushed, and Dupuis easily obtained permission from Chinese authorities to take a supply of arms by ship up the river to Yunnan. It is important here to state that these Chinese authorities sent a letter by Dupuis to the officials of Anam, calling upon them to assist him whenever he might make his attempt to ascend the Songcoi. But when he had bought his munitions of war, and the prospect of reaching his destination appeared quite certain, it was agreed that he should not call upon the Anamese to help him; in fact, it was arranged that he should not let the authorities at Hue know anything about his mission. His vessels were fitted out at Shanghai and Hongkong, of course with the knowledge of China, and without interference, because ostensibly the expedition was in her interests. Towards the close of 1872 the enterprising Dupuis commenced his untried task, and being ably assisted by M. Senez, a French naval officer, he made his way into the main stream of the Red River, and brought his vessels up in front of Hanoi. The authorities of the place were not a little startled, and having no advices from Hue of the expedition, they did not know just what they were expected, or ought, to do. With the usual delay of oriental officials, and the slow means of communication, it came to pass that before they could do anything, Dupuis had passed on, having transferred his cargo to native boats, he left his ships at anchor before Hanoi, and paddled up to Yunnan. He said on his return that "the water route through Tonquin had been completely traversed, and its navigability effectually demonstrated." It was at this juncture that it became manifest that what he had done ostensibly for China he meant to claim for the benefit of France. His cargo of arms and ammunition for the destruction of rebel Mohammedans was quickly followed by others of a strictly commercial sort. One act of aggression is pretty sure to be quickly followed by another, and so whilst Dupuis was thus employed, M. Senez was devising measures by which any opposition from the Anamese could be completely disposed of. The Court of Hue was to be placed under the power of France: the chief points on the Lower Songcoi were to be garrisoned by French soldiers; gunboats and steam launches were to hold the waterway; the Tonquinese were to be stirred up to rebel against the King of Anam; and, if necessary, the officials of Hue were to be placed on a convict station. The remarkable part of all this is that at that time there existed a treaty between France and Anam, and that the latter country was also a recognised vassal of China. M. Senez, therefore, proposed still further to tighten the French grip of the country, and to ignore any relationship between the authorities at Hue and Pekin. Wild and impracticable as this scheme was, it attracted the attention of French authorities at Saigon. It was made to appear to them, and they believed it, that a great French dependency could certainly be created in Tonquin. It was a dependency of King Tuduc, but not very submissive. It was a subjugated province, with discrowned members of its old imperial family still ready at a favourable opportunity to assert their royalty as strongly as the late Comte de Chambord ever asserted his. What could be more hopeful? The thing which appeared so feasible was then attempted. A private individual, Dupuis, acting in the interests professedly of China, passed through the territory of Tonquin on the waters of the Songcoi, and then French authorities put in a claim to the country. It was a slender title to be sure, but it was better than nothing to begin with, and with it, and apparently with it alone, France began her reign and her troubles in that country. War vessels were prepared and sent to the scene of action under the command of M. Garnier. Though a military man, he was also a traveller, and having some knowledge of the whole position, he saw how necessary it would be to conduct the expedition so as not to excite the hostility or even the suspicion of China. He said, "An expedition without any ostensible object will probably cost us unlooked for interventions. What should we do, if for instance, the Court of Pekin were to order, at the request of the Anamese Government, the troops of Yunnan to march down into Tonquin in order to defend it against our invasion? Those troops are armed with the rifles and mitrailleurs sold them by Dupuis; they have also European instructors. Moreover, if conquest is such an easy matter, administration is a task of difficulty, and we absolutely lack the necessary staff for it. Would it not be preferable, therefore, for us to pose as the champions of the rights of the Hue Court, and to impose upon it in return for our protectorate, the opening of Tonquin to commerce? We should then place ourselves in an absolutely unassailable diplomatic position." It was determined therefore that M. Garnier should appear on the Songcoi as the friend of Tuduc. The latter was the foil of the expedition. Rebels against his authority and pirates on the Red River were to be smitten hip and thigh with great slaughter if they would neither submit nor flee; and not they only, but also the unhappy Dupuis was provided for. He was a mandarin, and if he preferred that title and his Celestial friends, forgetting that he was also a Frenchman, with obligations to France, he was to be quietly put out of the way. M. Garnier's reception in Tonquin was not warm, either from the Tonquinese or from the Anamese officials resident there. Nobody seemed to know exactly what he had come to do, or would do if opportunity offered. He had more than one card to play, and generally speaking his policy meant "Heads I win, and tails you lose." The Anamese officials were suspicious, and the Tonquinese not at all confiding. It must have looked strange that a foreigner from so distant a country as France should come to be champion for either party in a strife supposed then to be impending. And it must still further have shaken the confidence of all parties when M. Dupuis so readily gave in his adherence to the new mission. Garnier was delighted with him for it, and wrote the authorities, saying "M. Dupuis shows himself full of patriotism and good sense, and readily defers to all my instructions." This may be a tribute to his good sense, but what about his gratitude to China? And whilst it said great things for his patriotism, what about his fidelity to his old friends? Having arrived at Hanoi, the young commander was received without demonstration by the representatives of Tuduc, and some time was occupied in bootless interviews and correspondence. Garnier said plainly at last that his object was to open up the Songcoi to French commerce. The authorities at Hanoi said, In that case you must make arrangements at Hue, and not here. That was an ultimatum to which he replied in his own way. He said, "I have resolved on this striking action. On November 15th I will attack the citadel. I will arrest the Marshal, and send him to Saigon in one of Dupuis' vessels, which I will borrow for the occasion. I will then officially proclaim at Hongkong and along the whole coast of China this country open to commerce, and the Customs will supply me with the means of carrying on the government." This is the man who went to Hanoi to fight for the King of Anam. What could not be done by fair means was to be done by foul means, and one is forcibly reminded of the wolf and the lamb. Severe measures had to be used. The city was bombarded, and taken in an hour. What is remarkable is that some Chinese soldiers under Dupuis assisted at the siege. Having taken a city in an hour, unlimited conquest appeared possible to the puissant Garnier. Small as was the force at his command, he left a garrison in Hanoi, and proceeded with a mere handful of men to take two other large cities. This was done, it must be borne in mind, against Anamese authorities, and yet Garnier continued to give it out that he was acting in the interests of King Tuduc. It was not reasonable to suppose that the Anamese would take such a defeat quietly, and so when Garnier was busy at the siege of Namdinh, they rallied their forces, and allied with them a number of old Taeping rebels, who had seen hard service in their day. Though no match for the French soldiers, taken man for man, in numbers and dogged perseverance they were, Garnier returned to Hanoi to quell this new rising, and in the maddest fashion threw his life away in an attack, single-handed, against a host of the Black Flags. It was necessary now, as speedily as possible, to come to terms with the Anamese authorities, for whom and against whom Garnier had made war. What could not be done by the sword had now to be attempted by diplomacy. M. Philastre, who had remonstrated with M. Garnier for his rashness, was now entrusted with the task of negotiating with the Court at Hue, and hereupon followed the treaty of 1874. Tuduc bound himself to do and not to do certain things, apparently with an utter forgetfulness of what he owed to China; and France disregarded it, or forgot it, too. The results of the campaign did not end with the treaty. The presence of the French at Hanoi had certainly encouraged the Tonquinese to think of casting off Tuduc's yoke, and of placing upon their throne some eligible member of the old Royal family of Li. One hardly knows whether to be amazed or amused that the Tonquinese should trust the French, who had played such a part with their Anamese neighbours. Be this as it may, a serious rebellion broke out in the territory of Tonquin, and this probably had something to do both with the terms of the new French treaty and the despatch with which it was consummated. The poor, misguided Tonquinese soon had cause to repent their confidence. French officers assisted the Anamese to put down the rebellion, which had been encouraged, if not incited, by them. At last the Tonquinese awoke from their dream, and said that they would never more trust a treacherous Frenchman. The joke comes in here, that these were the people whose goodwill it was of the first consideration to France to win and keep. It was their territory that was to be opened to French commerce; that was to become a French dependency! Still trade began to flow up the Songcoi, but M. Cailland says it was not French trade. He says: "Only the Chinese, and those having close commercial relations with them, have benefitted by the opening of Tonquin. There is no French commerce there at all." It is not French trade, because France either has not any trade to do there, or she lacks the enterprise to do it. Meanwhile, poor Dupuis was completely stranded; his country, for which he had done so much, forgot him. He had been used to draw the chesnuts out of the fire and then was not allowed to share them, and was not further useful. He has been told that he deserves compensation both from France and from Anam, and before paying him her own obligation France has told Anam that she must pay him hers. Ostensibly, to enforce his claim, to protect Catholic Christians, said to be persecuted in Tonquin, and to see what can be done for French commerce on the Red River, the expedition of 1881, under Captain Riviere, was sent out. Apparently he was about as well instructed and as well fitted for his mission as the ill-fated Garnier, for he pursued a similar line of conduct, and shared his fate. It is not very reasonable to suppose that either party will or can now place much confidence in their French deliverers. Whatever may be their own little domestic quarrels, and however eager they may be to fight them out to the bitter end, it is not very likely that they will, either of them, trust themselves under the wing of France, who has nothing particular at present to fight for and who, if she should win at last, will require as an indemnity for her costs something more than gold and gratitude. From a simple pretence to open Tonquin to commerce, and this by a private individual, the matter has grown till French writers state it thus:—"While restoring the Li dynasty to Tonquin, France will leave it only the honours of royalty, and reserve for herself its power. All military authority ought to be in her hands. Troops raised in Tonquin itself could be sent to occupy the colony of Saigon, while the greater number of our own troops would be stationed in the more salubrious climate of Tonquin." And for what? Does France really mean to do all this for the benefit of England, Germany, and China? Until she knows how to trade as vigorously as they do she is working for them, not for herself. The value of these countries is indisputable, though, to get a correct appraisement of them, it is necessary to read other than French travellers. Tonquin has mineral resources, and is a rich grain-growing country; and Yunnan, lying north of it, is probably richer still, at least in minerals. But the whole question hinges largely, if not absolutely, upon what China is willing to do, or to allow to be done. It is said that the authorities at Pekin never gave any instructions to Dupuis, however thankful they may have been for his services; and it is still a question to what extent they regard Anam as a vassal, and are prepared to stand by her against all comers, the French not excepted. About her obligation to do so there appears to be little reason to doubt. China certainly has interfered in the easy and honourable task of formally investing the Kings of Anam, and in the pleasant duty of receiving periodic tribute from them. Unless she is a fair weather friend, which is not impossible, she may not as yet interpose save in a diplomatic way. Should the worst be done, France or China would not suffer alone, and possibly not these two Powers only would be drawn into the conflict. Every interest in China waters must suffer, and both England and Germany might have to interfere in self-defence.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19.

Banco Court.—(Before his Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE and a jury of four.)

FULTON V. KIRKPATRICK AND OTHERS.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Iceton and Faithfull (agents for Mr. Neville, of Bourke), for plaintiff; Mr. Pilcher and Mr. M'Culloch, instructed by Messrs. Shorter, Fitzgerald, and Asher (agents for Mr. Radford, of Bourke), for defendants.

The plaintiff's case was that he arrived in Bourke in March, 1882, and being anxious to set up in the drapery business, entered into an agreement with the defendants, whereby they agreed to erect a brick building, to be completed by the 27th May, two months from the date of the contract. Relying upon this promise, the plaintiff gave an order to a Melbourne firm for winter goods, but at the time they arrived the building had not even been commenced, and the plaintiff was compelled to store them in his own dwelling-house, where they suffered considerable damage. Another item of loss upon the non-fulfilment of the contract was the interest in the lease of the premises, which the plaintiff was to rent at a certain sum per week for the term of two years, with the option of taking them on for a third at the same rent. The plaintiff claimed £2000. The defendants pleaded that the contract had been rescinded, and that they had been discharged and exonerated from the promise; but the question finally resolved itself into an assessment of damages.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, in summing up, remarked that the verdict must be for the plaintiff, as he had proved both the making and the breach of the contract, and that the question for the jury was to what amount of damages he was entitled. The defendants must be taken to know that the plaintiff was about to start in the drapery business, and that he wanted a shop; for whatever losses then which might have arisen from the defendants not having the buildings ready, the plaintiff was entitled to damages. The plaintiff had substantially the right to have the premises for three years.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, finding the value of the lease to be £390, and the damage on the goods to amount to £135—total, £525.

Leave was reserved to defendants to move to reduce the damages to £135.

HORGAN V. FULTON.

Mr. Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Shorter, Fitzgerald, and Asher, for plaintiff; Mr. G. B. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Iceton and Faithfull, for defendant.

The plaintiff in this case was a dressmaker, and in the employ of the defendant, who happened to be the plaintiff in the preceding action. The claim was for £12, due as wages from the defendant, who had dismissed her from his service.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE refused to certify for costs.

ROBINSON V. MOFFATT.

Mr. Manning, instructed by Mr. Ashdown, for the plaintiff; Mr. Edmunds, instructed by Mr. Waldron, for the defendant.

This case was proceeding when the Court adjourned.

PARROTT V. RUTLEDGE.

Mr. Pring, instructed by Messrs. Robertson, Fisher, and Rolfe, for the plaintiff; Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Heydon, instructed by Messrs. Iceton and Faithfull, for the defendant.

The case is still proceeding.

In the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice FAUCETT and a jury of four.)

M'ARTHUR AND OTHERS V. SECCOMBE.

Mr. Dawson, instructed by Messrs. Lawrence and Rich, for the plaintiff executors, Mr. C. E. Pilcher and Mr. Lingen, instructed by Mr. A. Nicholson, for the plaintiff executrix; Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. Knox, instructed by Messrs. J. Dawson and Sons, for the defendant.

The jury were William George Collins, Richard Johnson, Thomas Tuft, and John George Catley.

The hearing of the case occupied seven days, viz., September 10, 11, 13, 14, 17, 18, and 19.

The plaintiffs were Adam M'Arthur, David Evans Williams, and Frederick Richard Seccombe, executors, and Margaret Lacey Tucker-Seccombe, executrix of the late Roger Seccombe, late of Dubbo, publican, and formerly of Milton. The defendant was Susan Ann Berry Seccombe, widow of the testatrix. The plaintiffs alleged that on 17th July, 1882, testator executed his last will, that on the 3rd November he made a codicil thereto, and on the 25th of the same month, the day before he died, he executed a second codicil, all these instruments being duly executed by him when of sound and disposing mind, memory, and understanding. The defendant lodged a caveat on the 11th January last against probate being granted. The plaintiffs claimed that probate ought to be granted to them, as such executors, with leave reserved to Margaret Lacey Tucker-Seccombe to come in and prove.

The defendant charged: First, that the testator was not of sound and disposing mind, memory, and understanding at the time of the execution of the documents in question; and second, that he was under the undue influence of Mrs. Margaret Lacey Tucker-Seccombe at the time of their execution.

The testator, Roger Seccombe, married the defendant, Susan Ann Berry Dodge, in Devonshire, England, on the 31st July, 1843, she then being 18 years old, and there were 11 children, issue of the marriage. The evidence went to show that he lived happily with his family at Milton, on the southern coast, until 1879, and accumulated considerable property. In 1875 he became addicted to drink. In 1876 the plaintiff—Mrs. Tucker—went to Milton. In June, 1879, testator went to Tasmania, and Mrs. Tucker admitted that she met him there at the end of the same month. They then purchased an hotel at Waratah, Mount Bischoff, Tasmania, on equal shares, the license being taken out in the name of Roger Tickle Tucker. In March, 1880, the testator returned home ill, and it was stated by plaintiffs' witnesses that he was in a filthy condition, and was almost an imbecile. He remained at Milton till the following month, and returned to Tasmania. He came home again in July, 1881, and stayed some time. In October Mrs. Tucker came up to Sydney, and was married to Seccombe by the Rev. Thomas Johnson, of Wynyard-square, on the 24th October, 1881. Mrs. Tucker denied the clergyman's assertion that he asked Seccombe whether he was one of the family at Milton, and that thereupon he hesitated, and she answered, "No, Mr. Seccombe has no relatives in the colony." She denied that there had been any cohabitation before marriage. Testator told her he never had been married, but she knew he had children. After the marriage they went back to Mount Bischoff and let the hotel. Soon afterwards they took the Imperial Hotel at Dubbo, and kept it for eight months, when he died. According to her opinion testator was a self-willed shrewd man. She swore she had used every endeavour to keep him away from drink and had never used any influence with him except as to the Mount Bischoff property, which was settled upon her and the Dubbo property. A great many letters which passed between the testator, his sons, and bank managers were put in to show that he was thoroughly capable of transacting business. Dr. Eichler, who saw the testator in 1881 several times, did not notice any weakness of mind about him. Dr. Crommelin, who had known him at Milton and stayed in his house in 1875, said he would consume from one and a half to two bottles of alcohol per diem, and was very childish in his ways. He had a habit of getting up in the middle of the night and lecturing his sons. His opinion at that time was that he had taken so much alcohol that he had become almost imbecile. Dr. Southam, who attended the testator at Dubbo, considered he was quite capable of disposing of his affairs up to the day before he died, though he would require rousing up to enable him to do so. He had not the appearance of an habitual drunkard. Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe had applied to him for advice as to chloride of gold cure for intemperance.

The will of the 7th July, 1882, devised his property to trustees till Edith, his youngest daughter, became of age; then Frederick to take Ayrie Bowrie farm, subject to charge of £800 and £20 per annum, with right to use four rooms and furniture, to Mrs. Seccombe (spoken of as Susan Ann Berry Dodge, her maiden name); Briandairy to Thomas, subject to a charge of £1000; the Waratah Hotel, Tasmania, to Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe; and legacies as follows:—Edwin, £100; Agnes, £100; Helen, £150; Henry, £300; Caroline, £500; and the residue to Edith. The first codicil, which was made on the 3rd November, 1882, gave the furniture, lease, and license of the Imperial Hotel, Dubbo, to Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe. The second codicil executed on the 28th of November, the day before he died, revoked his will, save as to the Waratah property, and declared that ample provision had been made for Thomas, John, Edwin, Harriet Williams, Agnes Wenham, Charity Brown, and Helen. It devised Ayrie Bowrie to Frederick and Henry, subject to the maintenance of their mother and unmarried daughters—with use of 4 rooms for Mrs. Seccombe, as well as the payment of £500 each to Caroline and Edith—the residue going to Frederick and Henry.

The will was prepared by Mr. A. Nicholson from instructions which were brought to him by testator in writing. Mr. Booth of Dubbo prepared the codicil, as well as the settlement of the Tasmanian property on Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe. He took the instructions as to the first codicil in May or June from testator himself, and the documents were forwarded to him in June. Testator signed the deed of conveyance before him, and at the same time said he had given some land to one of his sons for less than it was worth. He had been consulted by testator with reference to other matters, and he always seemed to know what he was about. The instructions for the last codicil were received three weeks before his death. They were in Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe's handwriting, and signed by testator. The day before his death witness saw him, and told him he had the instructions with him, and after reading a portion of them testator, in reply to his question, said he wished a document drawn up in accordance with them. The codicil was immediately prepared, and witness and his clerk took it up to the hotel. When it was read over testator, when asked if it was correct, nodded his head. He could not speak plainly. Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe, and a servant were present—the latter for part of the time. Witness added a few words to the attestation clause, and testator made his mark with his (witness') assistance. Testator then muttered that he was sorry he had given him such a lot of trouble. Evidence of capacity was given by a number of witnesses who knew the testator at Dubbo, and on the other hand there was adverse testimony given by people who had known the deceased at Dubbo and Milton.

Mr. Stephen, in addressing the jury, said Mrs. Tucker had no other reason in marrying the testator than that of greed. Her intentions were happily disclosed by the evidence of the Rev. Mr. Johnson, who stated that when they came to him to be married, in reply to a question put by him, whether testator was any relation to the Seccombes of Milton, Mrs. Tucker said Mr. Seccombe had no relations in the colony, and that they had come from Tasmania. What better proof could they have of the influence she wrought over the testator than Mr. Hazlet's evidence, which was that the testator wished to insure his life for £500, and thereupon Mrs. Tucker put her arms round testator's neck, and said, "You will make a make a will in my favour, won't you, papa, dear?" Then there was the medical evidence, which showed the testator had been suffering from softening of the brain and enteric fever. There was no doubt that the testator had become completely under Mrs. Tucker's control, and there was everything to warrant the supposition that, inasmuch as she knew of the existence of his first wife, she might even have used a threat, if it had been necessary, for the attainment of her ends. It had been said that, if Mrs. Tucker wished to use her influence, why did she not go for the whole property; but she was too cunning to do that. He asked the jury to believe that this woman, who had been so wicked in her conduct in enticing this old man away from his respectable wife and family, would not scruple to use her malign influence to secure as much of the property as she could. He left both issues to the jury, with every confidence that they would decide them in his favour.

Mr. Pilcher, in reply, said it was admitted that in 1878 the testator was sane; yet the principle embodied in the instructions he gave Messrs. Dawson and Sons for a will in that year was found in the very codicil which was executed on the day before his death, viz., that whatever advances he made to his sons during life were to be charged against their legacies. There was evidence to show that the testator had been drinking very heavily before 1881, and had got into his drunken habits before he became associated with Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe. The evidence as to his maudlin state at that time would not stand analysis, and there was at least one witness to show that he had remembered conversations about business, and had used that recollection when subsequently dealing with the same transaction. It had been said that the testator returned home on one occasion in a pretty state, and it was insinuated that he had come into that state through his contact with Mrs. Tucker; yet it turned out that he had been staying with one of his daughters, and had actually been entrusted with the charge of a little child when travelling in the coach. There was no evidence that the alleged delusion that Mrs. Seccombe was not his wife had ever been made known to anyone. It was a very singular thing that, with the exception of the reference to his second marriage, this delusion was not alluded to. The evidence even of the independent witnesses went to show that after he married Mrs. Tucker she did all in her power to keep him away from drink. Did they suppose that if the Rev. Mr. Johnson had seen anything suspicious, either in the condition of the testator, or any other circumstance, he would have solemnised the marriage on the 24th October, 1881? Dr. Eichler saw him next day, and two days afterwards, and his evidence was that there was nothing wrong with him. A few days later he wrote a letter to his son, just before leaving for Hobart, in which he spoke of his banking affairs and other business matters in a particularly shrewd way. The testator had not his bank-book, but he had a pretty good idea of the state of his balance at the Milton Bank. The subsequent letters written from Tasmania and Dubbo could not possibly be more conclusive of a man's sanity than they were. These letters spoke with infinitely more power than any oral testimony as to his condition when at Milton. The other side had never attempted to show that any of the statements in these letters were imaginations or delusions. The letters written by the sons and daughters to this poor old man without any mind showed that they thought he knew what he was about. There was only one son who now came forward and said his father was an imbecile. Perhaps if the other members of the family had been called they would have said that their father was not incapable. Frederick Seccombe's own letter, written in March, 1882, showed that he also considered that his father was in his proper senses. To meet the requirements of the law the will dealt with the whole of his property, and provided for every one of his family excepting those for whom he had previously made ample provision. Dr. Southam never would have told the testator he should settle his affairs if he did not think him able to do so. The law permitted influence in the way of endearment such as had been described by the witness Halloff. He wished to guard the jury against any prejudice against his client because much as the conduct of the testator with her might be condemned by them, that made no difference as far as the will was concerned. Admitting the very worst case against his client, did not the evidence show that she had been very kind to him? Was it not a reasonable hypothesis that seeing that she had been kind to him, and they had lived happily together, that he should leave her property which he had acquired since his last distribution, in Tasmania and in Dubbo, without depriving his children of their former provision—property which she had half bought.

His HONOR, in summing up, said that in the ordinary course of things the executors had propounded the testamentary documents in question, but in one respect the case was curious, for one of the executors—Frederick Seccombe—was anxious to get rid of the will. Probably he had taken this course under the impression that it was the only one open to him to serve his purpose, but at the same time he did not think anyone would doubt his sincerity in that respect. There was no getting over the fact that Mrs. Seccombe, with whom testator had lived for nearly 40 years, and who had borne him a large family, was his wife. Considering the expressions used by testator in his will regarding this lady one could readily understand that the wife and children would do all they could to get the document set aside. It was admitted that the documents had been duly executed. As long as a man had sufficient capacity to comprehend the extent of the property he was disposing of, and the claims of those who were the natural objects of his bounty; in fact, knows generally what he is doing, then, notwithstanding the fact that he made a capricious or even a wicked distribution, that will must stand. Though it would be necessary for the jury to separate the two issues, as to capacity and undue influence, still it was almost impossible to prevent them from merging one into the other. A person who really had capacity would not be so much subject to undue influence as one who had not. It appeared to him that the most important question was that of undue influence. The law was clear upon the point that persuasion and endearments were not sufficient to constitute undue influence; there must be coercion or fraud. It was not sufficient to show that undue influence might have been used; there must be positive evidence from which you can infer it. The correspondence which had been produced was dated up to a very late period, and was certainly inconsistent with incapacity. There was no doubt that there had been a familiarity between testator and Mrs. Tucker at Milton which no decent woman should have allowed, seeing that his wife was living in the same place with a large grown-up family. It appeared that under the pretence that Mrs. Seccombe was not his wife, Mrs. Tucker permitted his attentions to her. Then she went to Tasmania and kept an hotel with him in their joint names, and though she says she was not living with him as man and wife, still they were living in the same house. All this showed that she was not a woman of strong moral feeling. These things were only of importance as affecting her veracity. Did they believe that testator had gone to Tasmania under her influence, or by his own free will? They would ask themselves did they believe the Rev. Mr. Johnson or Mrs. Tucker as to the conversation which took place at the time of the marriage? Was testator under the influence of Mrs. Tucker at this time in such a way as to amount to coercion? Was it mere wickedness that induced testator to marry again, and lay himself open to a criminal charge? Who was it wanted the second marriage? They had heard that they were living together, and who did they think was likely to bring it about? As Mr. Pilcher had reminded them they must not be carried away by any prejudice induced by her misconduct, but they might consider any decision in respect to that misconduct when dealing with other parts of the case as to which her evidence was important. The jury were entitled to look to important transactions when seeking for evidence of undue influence. They would have to ask themselves whether the marriage of a man to a woman, after he had been living with another woman who prima facie was his wife for 40 years in a respectable position, was not an important transaction. The evidence of Mr. Booth as to a remark made by testator that he had sold some land to one of his sons for less than it was worth, would perhaps in their opinion account for the absence of any provision for Thomas in the last codicil. He concluded by reminding them that undue influence was not to be presumed without influence. It was not sufficient that the evidence should leave it consistent with either view.

The jury retired at 12.15, and returned to Court at 2.15 with the following finding:—We find for the plaintiff on the first issue, as we consider from the evidence that he retained sufficient soundness of mind to know what property he was possessed of and what would be the result of his disposition of it. We find for the defendant on the second issue, as we find from the evidence that Mrs. Tucker had acquired such an influence over Roger Seccombe as that he had ceased to exercise his mental powers independently.

His Honor heard several urgent ecclesiastical motions, and granted probate in the wills of the following:—His Grace Roger Bede Vaughan, £61,828; Archibald Bell, £18,249; Thomas Souter Harwood, £3975.

RE TRUSTS OF BLAXLAND'S SETTLEMENT.

Mr. Browning moved for the appointment of the Rev. Charles Garnsey and Mr. J. A. Dowling as trustees under the trusts of the settlement.

Granted.

GAROT V. SMITH.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., Mr. C. E. Stephen, and Mr. F. Barton for the plaintiff; Mr. Owen, Q.C., Mr. C. J. Manning, and Mr. Lingen for the defendant.

The defendant seeks to have the injunction granted in June last dissolved. The parties dispute possession of a certain very valuable silver mine at Thackaringa, nearly 1000 miles west of Sydney. The mineral conditional purchase in question is 60 acres in area.

After the affidavits had been read, the further hearing was adjourned till Friday.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19.

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

In the matter of William Adams, second meeting. One debt was proved. Insolvent was examined as to the correctness of his schedule, and the meeting terminated.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

WEDNESDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge WILKINSON).

DOVEY V. GROTH.

In this case, which was heard before a jury of four, James Dovey sued Herman H. Groth for £200, damages for alleged malicious prosecution. Dr. R. N. Sly, instructed by Mr. C. B. Pitt, appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mr. T. M. Williamson, for defendant. It appeared that for four years plaintiff had been in the employ of defendant, who was an oil and colourman in George-street. On the 12th of July he was accused by defendant with having stolen two bottles of polish, valued at 8s., the property of defendant. He was arrested, but on his case being tried at the police court, it was dismissed; and it also appeared that defendant had admitted that he proceeded against plaintiff merely because he was impertinent to him. Plaintiff's case was that he took the polish as samples, and with the view of furthering his master's business. The defence was simply one of not guilty. Having heard the evidence the jury returned a verdict in favour of plaintiff for £25.

AUSTEN V. COMMISSIONER FOR RAILWAYS.

In this case, which was heard before a jury of four, Henry Austen sued the Commissioner for Railways for £32 5s., for loss sustained by him in consequence of a tram of defendant's colliding with a horse and van belonging to him. Mr. Bruce Smith appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. Nash for defendant. It appeared that the accident occurred in Elizabeth-street, between King-street and Hunter-street. The horse and van were in charge of plaintiff's son, and while they were standing near King-street, a motor approached. By some means the horse got on the line, in consequence of which the motor ran into it, and did it such injury that it had to be killed. The van and the harness also were considerably damaged. Plaintiff's contention was that the driver of the motor had ample opportunity to avoid collision. Having heard the evidence, the jury returned a verdict in favour of the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

DISTRICT COURT.—THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20.

Jury Cause.—Wien v. Allen.

Causes.—M'Beth and another v. Richmond, Teo v. Cameron.

POLICE.

Mr. Crane, S.M., presided in the Charge Court, yesterday.

Barney Moss, 19 years, on a charge of having used obscene language in Abercrombie-street; and Frederick Barton, 16 years, and Thomas Johnston, alias Todd, 17 years, for having used obscene language in Hay-street, were each fined 60s.

Patrick M'Girr, 26 years, cabman, for having used obscene language in George-street; Kate Corcoran, 22 years, for having used indecent language in Goulburn-street; and Thomas Kebbiston, 36 years, on a charge of having used obscene language on the Ultimo-road,—were each fined 40s.

Margaret Devlin, 21 years, for having no visible lawful means of support, was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for three months.

James Howard, alias Browney, was charged with having no visible lawful means of support. The police report showed that the prisoner had been convicted of various offences, and that he was a constant companion of bad characters. The prisoner was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for four months.

John Wilson, 17 years, and Thomas O'Brien, 23 years, were separately charged with having six bags in their possession, reasonably suspected to have been stolen. Both prisoners were arrested in Darling Harbour at midnight on Tuesday, when they were carrying the bags. Wilson, who had previously been in gaol, was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for one month. O'Brien, who had been in gaol a number of times, was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for three months.

Donald Anderson pleaded guilty to having cruelly ill-treated a horse in York-street. The defendant had been arrested by Inspector Webber, of the Animals Protection Society. Mr. Crane inspected the horse, which was in a wretched condition, and had a wound on the back. Mr. Webber said that he found the horse harnessed to a cart. He examined the horse and found that it had a large wound on the back and under the saddle. There was no chamber in the saddle to prevent it from resting on the wound. The horse was in a very poor condition. The defendant stated to the Court that he bought the horse about a month ago; it was in a very poor condition, and he had been feeding it well, but had not been able to get it in good condition; the horse being in poor condition a wound had broken out suddenly and without his knowledge. The wound was not there early that morning. Mr. Crane said he wondered that the defendant was not ashamed to work a horse in that condition. The horse was quite unfit to do any work. It was fortunate for the defendant that he had no load on the horse, otherwise he (Mr. Crane) would have sent him direct to gaol. The defendant would have to pay a fine of £3; in default to be imprisoned for 14 days.

Frederick Rose was charged with having, on the evening of Sunday, September 9th, assaulted one Tiy Hing, a Chinaman, and then robbed him of the sum of £23 and a cheque for £2 10s. Margaret Pring, alias Mary Amelia Smith, a young woman, described in the charge-sheet as being married, was charged with having aided and abetted Frederick Rose and others in the commission of the assault and robbery. Tiy Hing, the prosecutor, being unable to speak English very well, his evidence was taken through Ah Chong, an interpreter, and was to the following effect:—He resided in Castlereagh-street, and was a seller of vegetables; on Friday, 7th September, he saw the female prisoner, and showed her about £25 10s.; she promised to get married to him; he met her by appointment on the evening of Sunday, 9th instant, to make arrangements about getting married; he went for a walk with her; after they had proceeded some distance some larrikins came up to witness; the male prisoner and three other men came up to witness; it was about a quarter past 9 o'clock; the men beat him; the prisoner was one of those who struck him; two men came up to witness at first, and afterwards four came up to him; the prisoner was one of the two men who came up to him first; the prisoner took from witness 10 sovereigns, one £10 note, three £1 notes, and a cheque for £2 10s.; the men struck witness on the eyes, inflicting the bruises which were still visible; the woman Pring stood alongside the male prisoner, but did not cry out for assistance; afterwards she walked away with the male prisoner; witness then went to a police station and gave information to the police; he had known the female prisoner for more than two months; it was arranged on the Friday night that witness should take the money on the Sunday night; the money was to have been used in the purchase of furniture. In cross-examination the witness said he was sure that the prisoner was the man who robbed him; there were four larrikins, who assaulted witness, knocked him down, and robbed him; the prisoner caught hold of witness and put his hand into his pocket; the prisoner and others struck him; the assault and robbery was committed in Castlereagh-street; witness had the money in a purse which he had in his trousers pocket. A man named George Henry Smith, residing at No. 31, Chambers-street, Glebe, was called to give evidence on behalf of the two prisoners, but as he deposed that he had since the alleged robbery been married to the female prisoner, Mr. Crane ruled that his evidence was inadmissible. Constable Glanville gave evidence to the effect that he arrested the female prisoner in a house in Chambers-street, Glebe, and when he informed her of the charge she stated that she was with the prosecutor at the time of the alleged robbery. Both prisoners were committed for trial. Bail was granted; the male prisoner being required to enter into his own bond in the sum of £80, and to find two sureties in the sum of £40 each, and the female prisoner being required to find two sureties of £40 each.

Mr. G. O'M. Clarke, S.M., sat in the Summons Court.

Inspector Webber, of the Animals Protection Society, prosecuted in a number of cases of cruelty to animals. William Ryan and John Hayes pleaded guilty to charges of that nature, and were each fined 20s. and costs. Alfred Manser was charged with having illtreated a horse at Darling Point, on the 6th September. It appeared from the evidence of Mr. J. H. Hunt, architect, that he saw the defendant near the Darling Point school; the defendant had a horse attached to a vegetable cart; the horse was in low condition; defendant kicked the horse violently in the belly. As the defendant had previously been fined for cruelty to an animal, Mr. Clarke imposed a fine of £5 and costs.

Peter Dinan was charged with having illtreated a horse in William-street East, on the 10th instant. It seemed that defendant had driven a horse which was limping, was quite lame in the off fore leg, and was suffering from ringbone. The defendant had been fined on the previous Wednesday for working the same horse. A fine of 40s. and costs was now imposed.

James Hourigan pleaded guilty to having, on the 10th September, illtreated a horse, and was fined 40s. and costs.

Charles Hart, for having resisted a bailiff whilst in the execution of his duty, was fined 40s.

In the maintenance case of Mary Anne Donelan v. A. Charles Donelan, an order was made, by consent, for the payment of £11 per month; and in the affiliation case of Blanche Shaw v. Percy Monday, an order was made for the payment of 9s. per week.

Mr. Dillon, S.M., also sat for some time in the Summons Court, and heard evidence in a case of alleged detention of property. The further hearing of the case was postponed, with a view to a material witness being subpœnaed.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Buchanan, S.M., occupied the bench yesterday.

Alexander Wilson, a fireman on board the s.s. Garonne, was sent to gaol for seven days for having been absent from his vessel without leave.

Charles Wilson, a bootmaker, aged 22 years, was fined £5, in default three months' imprisonment, for having made use of indecent language in Macquarie-street.

Francis Seymour, aged 25 years, was charged with having deserted from H.M.S. Miranda, at Melbourne, on the 10th June, 1882. He was remanded to the Naval authorities.

Richard M'Evoy, a tailor, aged 31 years, was charged with having assaulted a little girl named Catherine Johnstone, aged 7 years, with intent. The evidence given for the prosecution in the case was to the effect that on the 10th instant the child went to the prisoner's place in Surry-street, a few doors distant from her parent's residence. The prisoner gave her a halfpenny, and then pushed her on the floor, committing the offence complained of. His wife at this stage entered the room in which the occurrence took place, and he then allowed the child her liberty. The prisoner was ordered to take his trial at the Circuit Court to be held on the 6th November next.

REDFERN POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, Mr. J. Dillon, S. M., dealt with the following cases:—

Harry Johnston and Harry Wade, for stealing three pigeons, value £2, the property of Samuel Blakey, received a sentence of seven days (separate) in gaol. Mr. Dillon said he was tired of speaking of the necessity of a reformatory for such cases as this; we should no doubt get one about the same time as a new police court for the central district was established—that was to say, in 10 or 15 years' time.

Mary Dowes was brought up on a charge of leaving her children without means of support. She was in the receipt of the rent of two cottages, and lived in a third rent free left her by her late husband; she was continually drunk, and the children were left without food, clothing, or bedding. They were recommended for admission to the Benevolent Asylum, the mother consenting to an order for 8s. a week for their support.

BALMAIN POLICE COURT.

On Tuesday, before Mr. Addison, S.M., James M'Cann, for inflicting grievous bodily harm on the person of David Arnot, was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions. Neil Barry, T. Reilly, and James M'Intosh pleaded guilty to riotous conduct and were fined 20s. and costs; in default seven days' imprisonment. Peter Matheson, for furious riding, was fined £2 and costs; in default one month's imprisonment.

MAGISTERIAL INQUIRIES.

Mr. W. T. Pinhey, J.P., held an inquiry on Monday at the Welcome Home Hotel, on the body of a woman named Mary Martin, who was found dead in bed at Caulfield's lodging-house, 152, Clarence-street. The deceased, who was 75 years of age, had been ill for some time, and at about 6 o'clock on Monday morning was found dead in her bed by two women named Jane Woodley and Sarah Foster, who occupied the same room. After taking the evidence, Mr. Pinhey found that death had resulted from natural causes.

An inquiry was also held by Mr. W. T. Pinhey, J.P., at Ultimo, on the body of a man named Edward Cammell, who died suddenly on Sunday last. The evidence showed that the deceased was lodging at a house, No. 302, Harris-street, Ultimo, and was given to drinking; about half-past 12 o'clock on Saturday night last the landlady of the house was aroused from her sleep by hearing some one fall downstairs; she called her husband, who immediately got up, and found the deceased lying at the foot of the stairs in an insensible state, and bleeding from the right ear. Medical aid was at once procured, but the deceased died shortly afterwards, without having regained consciousness. Dr. Ewington gave evidence to the effect that death had resulted from dislocation of the neck. Mr. Pinhey found that the deceased died from the effect of injuries received through having fallen downstairs.

THE INSPECTION OF LIQUORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I beg permission to trespass upon your valuable space to refer to that portion of the report of the Inspector-General of Police in your to-day's issue regarding the inspection of liquors. The matter was brought before the Minister of Justice by a deputation under the auspices of the New South Wales Local Option League.

Exception is taken to my statement, as one of the deputation, that no liquors from the country parts had been analysed. I at once accepted Mr. Cohen's assurance that I was mistaken, and did not expect the matter to go further. I presumed that the reference to up-country samples had been withheld from the Parliamentary return from which I quoted, or obtained since. In that paper, the latest printed, a list is given of places in and around Sydney from which samples were obtained; no reference is made to the country; and Mr. Watt, the Government Analyst, says that he is satisfied that dealers do not add to their liquors matters which are poisonous, noxious, or deleterious, "so far as Sydney and its suburbs are concerned."

The Inspector-General says some members of the deputation appear to be incredulous regarding the result of the analyses of liquor. I think there are reasons for being incredulous. The Act imposes a heavy fine upon any person who sells "liquor mixed with any deleterious ingredient, that is to say, any cocculus-indicus, copperas, opium, Indian hemp, strychnine, tobacco, darnel seed, extract of logwood, salts of zinc or lead, alum, or any extract or compound of any of such ingredients, or any other ingredients injurious to health." Last year in Victoria, under a nearly similar clause, there have been 115 convictions, but here none. Is it reasonable to suppose that liquor sold here is much purer than that in Victoria? Is it not more probable that there greater care has been used to bring offenders to justice?

The matter mainly rests with Mr. Watt. And another reason for incredulity is contained in his statements. In passing, it is worthy of note that he says "all the grog sold is white spirit flavoured." Mr. Watt speaks of three samples of colonial wine as "inferior articles; all appear to be made up." The same is said of some samples of spirits. He speaks, for instance, of a sample of pale brandy, which "contained tannin and burnt sugar, bad odour, traces of zinc and copper, apparently made from colonial wine." In another sample are "strong traces of copper." Out of the 80 samples of spirits, eight contained acetic acid, nine contained tannin, and six fusel oil. Mr. Watt, however, says that he has not found a single case which he could recommend for prosecution; or, to quote the words of the Act, he has found no "ingredient injurious to health." He then turns round and writes the following remarkable sentence:—"From a somewhat intimate knowledge of the character of the spirituous liquors generally retailed here—both home-made and imported—I would strongly recommend their use to be avoided as much as possible, and that they be regarded more as things of limited use than as articles of daily and, I fear, often of hourly consumption." Surely, Mr. Watt contradicts himself. Does he not clearly imply that the liquor sold is injurious to health? He seems to aim at pleasing the publican and the teetotaler, and thus probably frustrates an important clause in the Act. His words are difficult to reconcile. He says the publican does not break the law, yet tutors the temperance man is right by strongly recommending the use of liquor, because it is so bad, to be avoided as much as possible.

A further reason why persons are incredulous is found in the same Parliamentary paper. Analyses previously made are there given by a Mr. J. K. Waters, on a visit from Melbourne, who signs himself an inspector of liquors. Of three samples of whisky he says, "All contained a solution of sulphate of copper (blue stone), highly deleterious." Of two samples of rum, he writes that they "contained vitriol and blue stone."

In view of these statements is it strange that there should be incredulity? Is it unreasonable to ask Mr. Cohen, as the deputation did, to appoint some one to act in conjunction with the Government Analyst, or independently of him, especially as it appeared that the Chief Inspector of Distilleries had said that the "limited number of samples operated upon was due to the fact that, owing to incessant and urgent calls made upon him by other departments, Mr. Watt was not able to devote as much time to the requirements as he could have wished"?

This matter is one of great importance, and will, I hope, receive the consideration it deserves. It is but fair that the law-abiding publican should be protected in his business against the competition of those who may resort to dishonest means also injurious to thousands. In fact, as, alas! two or three millions are spent annually on intoxicants, the question affects a large section of the community. Much of the lunacy is said to be due to taking "doctored liquor." It would therefore tend much to the public good, especially in lessening intemperance, which blasts the happiness of so many homes, if the Government would take energetic steps to prevent the sale of impure liquor, which many are still convinced can be found in most parts of the colony.

I am, &c.,

Pyrmont, September 18. F. B. BOYCE.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—In Throat Diseases its efficacy is unequalled. Sir G. Duncan Gibb, Bart., M.D., Physician to the Westminster Hospital, writes:—"The value of Dr. de Jongh's Cod Liver Oil as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many affections of the Throat and Larynx, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails." Sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, pints, and quarts, by all chemists. Sole consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 71, Strand, London.—[ADVT.]

Custom House.—Entered Outwards: September 19, Wakatipu (s.), 1158 tons, Captain E. Wheeler, for Wellington and New Zealand ports; Friendship, schooner, 83 tons, Captain H. Reid, for Maryborough; Au Revoir, schooner, 138 tons, Captain J. Benson, for Mackay; R.M.S. Rosetta, 2136 tons, Captain G. W. Brady, for London, via Melbourne and Adelaide; Rook (s.), 275 tons, Captain R. G. Hutton, for Hobart, via Bulli.

The P. and O. Co.'s fine steamship Rosetta hauled off from the Circular Quay punctually at noon yesterday, and proceeded on her voyage to London via ports. The Rosetta looked, as she certainly was, in first-class order, both alow and aloft, and the engines were in grand trim for the homeward run. The Rosetta has always been a favourite boat with passengers, and this was manifested yesterday, as her list was a very fair one, and there is no doubt that when leaving Adelaide there will be no vacancies in the accommodation, especially when it is remembered that the cholera has been stamped out in Egypt. She had also a large and valuable cargo, consisting principally of wool, tin, copper, pearl shell, &c., besides specie to the value of £23,000.

The Kameruka left Eden at 8 a.m. on the 18th instant, called at Merimbula and Tathra, took in cargo, and left again at 1 p.m.; passed Cape St. George at midnight, was abreast of Woollongong at 5 a.m. on the 19th; entered Port Jackson Heads at 9.30, and arrived alongside company's wharf at 10 a.m. Experienced fresh northerly winds and fine weather throughout the passage. Cargo: 908 cheeses, 31 kegs butter, 175 bags bark, 6 bundles sheepskins, 195 cases maizena, 1 hide, 1 case eggs, 7 bags 1 side bacon, 1 bag pigs cheeks, 20 bags cattle food, 4 cases passengers' luggage, 44 pigs, 3 calves, and sundries.

Captain Hutton, of the Rook (s.) reports having weighed anchor in Byron Bay on Monday at 8 p.m.; rounded Cape Byron at 8.30 p.m., passed the South Solitary at 8 a.m. next morning, passed Smoky Cape at 12.30 and Seal Rock Point at 11 p.m. same day, and entered Sydney Heads on Wednesday at 9.30 a.m. Strong southerly winds with heavy head sea were encountered to Smoky Cape, thence variable winds with long southerly swell until arrival. The Rook brings 120,000 feet Brunswick pine in logs.

The Rosedale crossed the Manning bar at 10 a.m. on the 18th instant, and entered Sydney Heads at 4 a.m. on the 19th. Experienced easterly winds and fine weather throughout the passage. Cargo: 100 bags maize, 57 hides, 74 pigs, 9 coops poultry, 68 cases eggs, 60 bags lime, 17 bags bacon, 4 calves, 2 waggons, 1038 pieces cedar, 125 pieces hardwood, 62 bags oysters, and 30 packages sundries.

The A. S. N. Company's steamship Rockton left Levuka at 6.30 a.m. on the 11th instant, arrived at Suva at 10.30 a.m. same day; left again 6 a.m. on the 12th, Mount Washington was abeam at 11.45 a.m. same day, Lord Howe's Island abeam at 6.30 a.m. on the 17th, and arrived at Sydney at 11 a.m. on the 19th. Experienced moderate S.E., S., and N.E. winds and fine weather up to midnight of the 14th, when the wind hauled into N.W. and S.W., with showery weather and moderate sea to Lord Howe Island, and from thence moderate unsteady S.E. breeze and showery weather were met with to arrival.

The Platypus left the Macleay River at 10 p.m. on the 17th instant, and arrived in Sydney at 10 p.m. yesterday, having experienced northerly winds throughout the passage. Cargo: 1700 bags maize, 100 bags sugar, 25 calves, 1 cow, 1 horse, 39 pigs, 3 coops poultry, 3 cases eggs, and sundries.

The Illawarra Steamship Company's steamer Bega arrived in port shortly before 6 o'clock yesterday evening, having on board the members of the Marine Board, who have been engaged during the past week in inspecting the south coast lighthouses.

The schooner Darcy Pratt, from Wanganui, with a cargo of kauri pine, entered the Heads yesterday morning, and anchored below Garden Island. Her passage across was uneventful.

Yesterday morning the Australasian Steam Navigation Company received a cablegram from London, announcing the departure of the Hesketh, sister ship to the Dingadee, and the launch of the Cahors, a fast steamer, intended for the Sydney and Brisbane line.

A telegram was posted in the Exchange yesterday, stating that the navigation in Sunda Straits is safe, excepting between Krakatoa and Sebesie Islands. The lights on Java Heads and Varkensheak are burning, and the Fourth Point will soon have a temporary light.

The barque Clyde, bound to London, cleared the Heads at 1 p.m. yesterday.

The magnificent iron clipper ship Earl of Zetland, 1461 tons register, despatched by Messrs. Aitken, Lilburn, and Co., Buchanan-street, as their packet for the month for Sydney, New South Wales, left the Queen's Dock, Glasgow, on August 2, for the Gareloch, to adjust compasses before proceeding on her voyage. She carried a large and valuable cargo of general merchandise and a few passengers, and was in fine sailing trim. She was to be succeeded about the latter end of August by the fine iron ship Firth of Tay, 826 tons register.

The wreck of the barque Ceres, which is now on Brampton Reef, is to be sold by auction on Monday next by Mr. G. S. Curtis, of Rockhampton.

The barque Johan Irgens was, yesterday, berthed at Smith's Wharf.

From a recent issue of the North British Daily Mail we learn that Messrs. John Reid and Co., Port Glasgow, launched from their yard a steel screw steamer of about 920 tons, B.M., built to the order of Messrs. F. Parbury and Co., London, for the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Sydney. On leaving the ways she was gracefully named Fiona by Miss Winifred Curphey, of Berkley-street, Liverpool. The designs and construction of hull and machinery have been superintended by Captain Curphey, of the owners' employ, and by Messrs. MacNicoll and Smith, consulting engineers and naval architects, Glasgow. The vessel has cellular double bottom for water ballast, iron deck, sheathed with teak. Muir and Caldwell's steam steering gear, Harfield's windlass, and all the latest improvements, and will class 100 A1 at Lloyd's. The machinery will consist of two separate pairs of compound surface condensing engines, indicating upwards of 1000 horse-power, and will be supplied by Messrs. Rankin and Blackmore, Greenock.

New South Wales debentures, due 1902, seller 112.

We understand that a project is under the consideration of the bank managers for the establishment of a clearing house; and that there is every reason to believe that this important feature of banking operations, that has been found in other centres of commerce to be attended with so much advantage, will soon have a place in Sydney.

In the Import markets trade is quiet, with very little doing in any line of goods. Flour is quoted at late rates; one or two lots of cheap quality were placed at auction at a low figure. There is little doing in wheat. At auction this morning about 1800 packages of colonial sugars were catalogued. The proportion of the better qualities was smaller than at late sales; and prices a shade firmer—£30 to £31 was paid for low whites and yellow, and £26 for yellow; but only about 350 packages were sold publicly. The competition for the lower qualities was below vendors' limits, and the sugars were mostly withdrawn, and sales were made privately. The lower qualities of colonial may be quoted at £24 to £25. Privately, a line of 15 tons of Queensland yellows was placed at a figure supporting market rates. In fish, there is still a scarcity of quarter sardines, which are held for 4s. 9d., halves worth 8s. 9d. Tinned salmon in limited request, good fish to land quoted at 7s. 6d. Sales of oysters were made at 6s. In dried fruits there is a firm market; sultana raisins are hard to be procured. There is still very limited demand for hops; a line of eight bales of damaged Californian was placed under the hammer at 15½d. Messrs. N. F. Robarts, in their London report of August, report that the prospects of the English crop continued very encouraging. One or two small lots of Tasmanian had sold at £12, at which price there were still sellers but buyers held off. The quality was reported as not equal to English at £9, or any American or European growth. There is a better inquiry for malt; a large line of English was placed at 7s.; up to 7s. 9d. quoted for best samples. In liquors there is no change in the value of any of the principal lines of spirits; Geneva is a shade firmer, though late values are still quoted. A line of Robin's brandy was sold at a full figure; some business in case of the same brand was carried through. In metals, galvanised iron is moving off at late quotations; a parcel of Stork was placed at £22 17s. 6d. One or two good lines of tin plates have been quitted; I. C. Coke's at 18s. 9d., and Charcoal at 22s. Jute goods are unchanged in value with a limited demand only. In oils we note business in Devoe's faucet nozzle at 1s. 7d. In drugs we note sale of a parcel of soda crystals, to arrive, at £6 15s.; 70 per cent. caustic soda is rather dearer, £21 being asked for trade lines. Blasting powder is moving off freely, and sales of Hall's are quoted at up to 5½d. Cement is firm, sales of K. B. S. to arrive made at 17s. 6d.; on the spot this brand is scarce. There was not a large supply of forage and produce at the Darling Harbour market this morning. The attendance of buyers was good, but the market was rather dull. The following prices were realised:—Oaten and wheaten hay, 2s. 1d.; wheaten hay, in bundles, 5s. 1d.; lucerne hay, in truss, 2s. 7d. to 3s. per cwt.; oaten hay, 5s. to 6s.; inferior ditto, 2s. 10d. to 4s. 7d. per cwt.; in truss, 2s. 9d. to 4s. 11d.; in bales, 4s. 1d. to 6s. 1d., in sheaves, 1s. 6d. per cwt.; potatoes, 3s. 6d. per cwt.; clean straw, in bundles, 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d. per cwt.; oaten chaff, 5s. 1d. to 6s. 1d. per cwt.; interior ditto, 3s. 10d. to 3s 11d per cwt. The sales along the wharfs were well attended this morning, and there was a good supply of forage forward. Quotations were as follows, viz.:—Victorian oaten chaff, £5 to £5 5s.; ditto straw chaff, £3 to £3 10s.; Melbourne onions, £8 to £8 5s.; Circular Head potatoes, £2 15s. to £3 5s.; New Zealand ditto, £3 to £3 5s.; Ballarat ditto, £3 per ton; beeswax, 9d. to 10d.; honey, 5d. to 6d.; lard, 7d. to 9d.; cheese, 6d. to 8d.; bacon, 6d. to 8d.; tobacco leaf, 1½d. to 3d.; hen turkeys, 9s.; cock turkeys, 16s.; geese, 9s. to 10s.; ducks, 7s. to 8s.; fowls, 5s. to 5s. 6d. There was a good supply of lucerne forward from the Hunter River district, which realised from £2 to £3 per ton; maize sold at 3s., and oats (seed and feed), 2s. 6d. to 2s. 8d. per bushel.

From an interesting table compiled by Messrs. Griffiths and Weaver we learn that the following quantities of stock were sold through the Homebush Yards during the periods named:—From July to December, 1879, 39,098 cattle and 231,534 sheep; in 1880, 87,933 cattle and 650,739 sheep; in 1881, 90,934 cattle and 717,932 sheep; in 1882, 88,742 cattle and 732,063 sheep; and from January to August, 1883, 60,254 cattle and 606,981 sheep. The range of prices paid during the same period shows considerable fluctuations. Cattle were at their lowest value in January, 1880, when the best quality brought £8 10s. to £9 16s. per head. The price varied somewhat, but gradually tended upward until in July, 1881, there was a smart advance from £7 6s. to £8 16s. Best beasts rose in October of the same year to £10 10s. The price after that averaged about £9 until July, 1882, where £11 5s. was paid, £14 5s. being paid the next month, £12 7s. the next, and £10 in October. In the three following months the value was slightly above £9, the average since being about £8 10s. Sheep this year are decidedly dearer than they were in 1879 or 1880, and slightly higher than they were in 1881; but on the whole somewhat cheaper than during 1882.

At the wool sales held to-day by Messrs. Mort and Co., Limited, there was a fair demand at about late rates, but none of the parcels offered were of an attractive character, and the sales made do not offer a test of the market for larger parcels in better condition. The principal sales were as follows:—JS over M, 6 bales greasy at 8¼d.; CE over DC, 8 bales at 8¾d.; T over —, 11 bales at 8d.; Boolcarrol over HF&Co, 8 bales at 9d.; JRE over Q, at 8¼d.; JTX, at 8¼d. Sheepskins were in good supply, but prices were hardly so firm. Best brought 5½d. to 6½d.; medium, 4½d. to 5d.; and pelts and short-growth, 1½d. to 3½d. per lb.

Mr. John Bridge reports that at his sale of sheepskins to-day, he cleared a catalogue at about last week's rates, best realising 6½d.

The New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company, Limited, have received the following London wool telegram dated 18th September:—"Competition is decreasing and market is weaker, except long staple merino, light in grease; crossbred fine greasy in demand. Home buyers are purchasing freely, but continental demand is limited. Up to date, 236,000 bales have been sold. 108,000 bales have been taken for export."

The R.M.S. Rosetta sailed to-day for London, via ports, with 1238 bales wool, 121 cases pearlshell, 18,202 ingots and 3995 cakes copper, 9027 ingots tin, 77 blocks timber, 24 bales skins, 12 bales leather, 2 cases furskins, 33 cases and casks wine, 31 packages exhibits, 42 pieces shale, 22 bags ore, 2281 cases meats, 1 case pianos, 5 boxes gold coin (£23,200), 3 cases jewellery, and 6 packages sundries.

The Customs receipts to-day were as follows:—

Spirits, £1269 15s. 9d.; wine (still), £55 16s. 11d.; ditto (sparkling), £11; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £2 9s. 6d.; ditto (in bottle), £31 18s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £5; tobacco (unmanufactured), £292 8s.; cigars, £72 7s. 11d.; tea, £423 13s. 1d.; coffee and chicory, £29 19s. 9d.; sugar (refined), £27 3s. 7d.; ditto (unrefined), £76 15s. 9d.; molasses, £19 14s. 3d.; opium, £24 1s. 3d.; rice, £11 14s. 1d.; dried fruits, £521 16s. 2d.; nuts, £4 13s. 4d.; malt, £13 3s. 3d.; sarsaparilla, £1 12s.; specific duty, £1182 15s.; fisheries royalty, £3 10s.; pilotage, £34 6s. 4d.; harbour and light dues, £40 10s.; total, £4159 4s. 10d.

Mr. Curtis will sell, at Rockhampton, on Monday next, the wrecked barque Ceres.

STOCK SALE.

Messrs. Macdermott, Loughnan, and Scarr report having sold (in conjunction with Messrs. Raleigh, Aitken, and Co., Melbourne), on account of E. G. Greeves, Esq., Booriyallock, Victoria, 904-tooth rams, to go to Western Australia.—[Advt.]

THE RESULT WAS MARVELLOUS.

To Editor Sydney Morning Herald.
Sydney, New South Wales, August 31st, 1883.

Dear Sir,—I must certainly confess I had great belief in the curative properties of St. Jacobs Oil, and can personally endorse the fact. Some week or two ago I was unfortunate enough to contract a severe rheumatic pain in my left arm, which extended from the shoulder to the wrist; it was so painful, in fact, that I had to leave my office and go home. Obtaining a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, my wife rubbed my arm immediately, and again at nighttime. The result was simply marvellous, for the next morning the pain was all gone, and up to the present I have had not the slightest return of it. I recommend all suffering from rheumatism and similar pains to use St. Jacobs Oil, and feel fully convinced that they will find great benefit from its use.

I am, dear sir,
Yours faithfully.

SUPPLEMENTARY SUMMARY FOR INDIA AND EUROPE.

A supplementary summary for transmission to India and Europe will be published in the Herald of Friday next, 21st instant.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1883.

The lengthy and elaborate opinion of the Attorney-General upon the questions raised by the Supreme Court judgment in the stearine case justifies the action of the Government in appealing to the Privy Council. It is certainly undesirable that doubts should be entertained or uncertainty should exist as to either the legality of Executive proceedings in so important a matter as the collection of Customs duties upon articles not specified in the tariff, or as to the right of the Legislature to delegate to any other authority powers of legislation conferred upon it, and upon it alone, by the Constitution Act. As a matter of fact, these questions are in a state of doubt and uncertainty; this opinion is of itself sufficient evidence to show that. And under such conditions, it is the true policy for the Government to go to the court of ultimate appeal to have them set at rest. At the same time we cannot see that there is enough in the Attorney-General's opinion to warrant any confident expectation that the judgment of the Supreme Court will be reversed.

The chief questions raised in this case are two in number:—First, is the 133rd section of the Customs Regulation Act intended to delegate to the Governor power to direct the levy of Customs duties upon articles untaxed by the Legislature? And second, if that is the intention, has our Legislature authority to delegate such power to the Governor? It is to be hoped that the Privy Council will give a definitive answer to both; but it seems clear that the judgment might be reversed upon the first point only, whilst the second was left undetermined. If the 133rd section of the Customs Act was not intended, as Mr. Dalley says, to authorise the imposition of duties never contemplated by the Legislature, but was simply intended to give power to enforce the payment of duties which were actually in contemplation of the Legislature, the question as to the powers of our Parliament need not be raised or argued. No one will dispute the power of our Parliament to make provision for the protection of the Customs revenue by checking the evasion of duties actually imposed. It is not unreasonable, therefore, to infer from the strong effort that is made to show that our Parliament has a plenary and independent legislative authority, and not one that is delegated and limited, that the argument as to the real meaning and effect of the section is felt to be weak, or at least not strong enough to be relied upon solely.

From the point of view of a Colonial Treasurer or a Collector of Customs, it is natural that the importation of an article not specified in the tariff, when it checks the importation of an article specified in the tariff, and so diminishes the Customs revenue, should be regarded as an evasion, or even as a fraudulent evasion, of the duty. But that is not necessarily the correct view of the transaction. The Legislature taxes one article, and leaves another untaxed; and if both will serve substantially the same purpose, the inference is that the Legislature intentionally left it optional to everybody to use and import the untaxed article instead of the taxed one. And, again, no tariff can be regarded as sufficient for all time, and elastic enough to meet all possible changes in the customs and conditions of the community or resulting from the progress of invention. Fashions and habits undergo extreme changes, in the course of which it is quite possible that the demand for certain taxed goods may cease, and a demand for other goods that are untaxed may grow up instead. When the country cannot afford the loss of revenue which these changes would cause, it is the business of Parliament to provide means for making up the deficiency. But if the Governor is to exercise the power of ordering duties to be collected upon the new articles which the new fashion, or custom, or invention has introduced, no such action by the Legislature will be required. He does the work which the Legislature would otherwise have had to do, and, in fact, exercises legislative powers. Under the 133rd section of the Customs Regulation Act, the Governor is authorised to direct the levy of a duty on any imported article of merchandise which is, in the opinion of the Collector of Customs, "apparently a substitute for any known dutiable article." The section provides that the article upon which the levy may be thus made must have been unknown to the Collector, and therefore by implication unspecified by the Legislature itself, and therefore untaxed. Under such provisions, any newly invented article of food or dress which was so preferable to certain taxed articles of ordinary use that it wholly superseded them in the markets could be made subject to a duty at the instance of the Governor, because it would be not only "apparently," but beyond dispute a "substitute" for them. Perhaps the Government would say, "We have no intention to work the clause in that manner." But the meaning of the clause is not to be determined by the restricted use which any particular Government might see fit to make of it. The question is, What do the words really cover? If the Governor is empowered to direct the levy of a duty on any untaxed article which is imported in substitution for any known dutiable article, he is authorised in terms to exercise a power of taxation through the Customs scarcely inferior to that held by the Legislature itself. Under such provisions Parliament has only to frame a skeleton tariff, and the Governor is authorised to expand it in all directions to meet the changing conditions of civilised life.

It is argued that unless this power to protect the revenue be conferred upon the Executive, it would be quite impossible to meet and defeat daily attempts to defraud the revenue. Parliament, it is said, could not be perpetually asked to interfere. We do not see that that alters the case, if, as is implied by this very argument, the power of protection is a power which Parliament itself would exercise, but for the inconvenience of the thing—that is to say, a power of legislation. It is generally contended that in a free country the people alone, through their representatives, should have the right to tax themselves. If that be sound doctrine, it is not of much use to say that the revenue will certainly fall off unless we entrust the Executive with large powers of taxation. But there is room for arguing that without giving such powers to the Executive the revenue could be protected by the exercise of more care on the part of the Legislature. Take this case of stearine and candles for example. If Parliament, when imposing a duty upon candles, really intended that a duty should be levied upon all materials from which candles might be made, it could easily have said so, and then the need for Executive legislation in the matter of stearine for the protection of the revenue that might have been got from candles would not have existed.

To get a clear understanding of the subject from the Collector's point of view, the Attorney-General obtained from that officer a memorandum, which is embodied in the opinion. The publication of that memorandum goes far to show that the Collector's point of view is not the one from which the question of law is to be considered. It sets forth "a few of the items under which the 133rd section has been made to apply," and upon which inferentially duty could not have been collected but for that section. The first is "acetic acid, as opposing duty on vinegar." Now, as vinegar is acetic acid in a diluted and more or less impure condition, it is by no means clear that the 133rd section was required to make acetic acid pay the vinegar duty. Again, we have "chocolate creams, as opposing duty on confectionery." If chocolate creams can be properly classed as confectionery, the duty could be collected without this clause; but if they cannot, then the clause would be dragged in to enable the Governor to tax an untaxed article were chocolate itself untaxed. There is, however, a duty on chocolate, and yet the Collector refers to this section as enabling him to levy a duty on "chocolate sticks." Other items mentioned suggest a similar line of remark. It was surely unnecessary to have these special powers before the duty on cigars could be levied on cigarettes or little cigars and yet that proposition is here seriously set before us. The argument as to necessity needs stronger proof than this to support it. But, however strongly it were supported, the fact would still remain that to levy a duty on an untaxed article because it was a substitute for an article taxed by law, is to levy new taxation. There is no new taxation in levying duty on cigarettes, they are included within the duty on cigars. There would be no new taxation in levying duty on stearine candles, as stearine, if there were a duty on stearine. But there is new taxation in levying duty on stearine, which the tariff leaves free on the ground that it may be made into candles, and might be used for other manufactures. Stearine is not candles, and does not contain candles, and the word "candles" cannot be made to apply to it or to include it, without such a strained interpretation of the word as would amount to giving it a new and arbitrary meaning. Mr. Dalley contends for a free rather than a strict construction of the tariff law; but if "candles" is to be held to mean "stearine," this principle of free interpretation may be easily made to deprive us of the greater part of the free trade we boast of.

We have looked into the report and digested evidence of the Tariff Commission in Victoria with a view to see if there is in it anything that encourages the hope that at the forthcoming conference Victorian statesmen are likely to be in a position to propose a substantial approximation of tariffs, but we fail to discover any very promising indications. The inquiry conducted by the commission has been a wide-reaching one. Nearly all the protected trades have been represented amongst the witnesses. Freetraders have been also asked to give evidence, and some commercial men have been on the Commission. It is possible, of course, that there may be more free-trade sentiment in Victoria than makes its appearance in this document; for in matters of this kind a pushing and organised minority always makes itself better heard than an indolent majority which has not the spur of immediate personal interest. Still, after making all allowances, we cannot help feeling that this report shows either that the free-trade party in Victoria is very feeble, or else that it is very hopeless. The Chairman of the Commission has not encountered, or managed to provoke, any particularly hostile demonstrations in the course of his inquiries; indeed, a stranger, from reading the document, would hardly infer that there were any freetraders in Victoria at all. The complaints made against the present system are either that the duties are too light or that raw material, or useful machinery, is too heavily taxed. There is not a single vested interest that is willing to give up any duty that acts protectively. They all want further help in some shape or other—either more protection or larger markets. And this is the consideration which makes the document a rather unpromising one as regards any federal action towards a common tariff; for the larger market which the Victorian protectionists are clamouring for means, of course, a larger protected market. They have the run of the New South Wales market at the present time, and they are doing all they can in it. But that does not satisfy them. What they want is to have the same market more closed against foreigners, and so relatively more open to themselves. They do not want us to lower our duties, but to raise them—not to buy more cheaply, but to buy more dearly—or, in other words, to tax ourselves for the benefit of their industries.

Now, there can be no possible objection whatever to the Victorians trying to do the best they can for themselves. They have a right to their own policy, and they can tax themselves annually for the purpose of creating industries. Whether they gain or lose by it is their own concern, and their neighbours do not interfere. But it is when they want to enlarge the field of their policy, and to tax their neighbours to benefit themselves, that the objection arises. This is by no means a federal policy, and yet it is the only federal policy in the matter of Customs that Victoria seems prepared to propose. If this report of the Tariff Commission is a true index of public opinion, then that opinion is as rigorously protective as ever it was. Neither the bad times the colony has gone through, nor the exodus of a large portion of the male population, nor the greater relative prosperity of the older colony, nor the over-production of many protected articles, nor the low wages to which many women have been reduced where their labour is made available, has made any impression on the public mind adverse to the system. All these facts are explained away, and ascribed to anything but protection. The political feeling in favour of their policy—for it is far more a political feeling than an economical conviction—is too strong to be conquered by any reason or any experience that has as yet been advanced. We fail to discern anywhere any proof of reaction in the public mind. All the changes that Mr. Mirams proposes are not designed to diminish the quantity of protection, but to increase it. The one solitary exception, so far as he is concerned, is the proposal to abolish the stock tax. But it has not been abolished, and it does not seem as if it would be abolished, although a coalition Ministry is in power. If, then, public opinion in Victoria is not prepared to abate anything of protection, how can it approach the question of Customs federation? Obviously only by asking the other colonies to adopt its tariff. This is exactly what Mr. Berry told us two years ago was our manifest duty—that to this issue we must come, and should come, kick at it as we liked. Though Mr. Mirams does not say the same thing in words, his report goes to confirm Mr. Berry's assertion, for it indicates that there is no willingness on the part of Victoria to move one inch from the position it has taken up. If, therefore, there is to be a common standing ground for the two principal colonies, we must shift to where Victoria is, for our neighbours are not willing to budge. This reduces the problem to the question as to whether we are willing to make the proposed change. Has anything occurred to make us more ready than we were a year or two ago? Is the coming modification in our land law to be the forerunner of a change in our fiscal system? If we cannot get immediate revenue from the land, are we to be willing to make good the difference out of Customs? One thing seems clear, and that is that when the conference meets it will be too soon to answer any of these questions. The land debate will only just have begun, and the question as to how much we can get from pastoral revenues is one that at present is not very easy to answer. So that, whatever changes may take place in the future, nothing is very ripe for the present. Whatever may be Mr. Service's private wishes, he is tied by the presence of Mr. Berry, and also by the state of public opinion in Victoria. He is not in a position to promise concessions, and Mr. Stuart is not in a position to promise that all the yielding shall be on our side.

The case of Cook against the Scottish Imperial Insurance Society, tried the other day at the Supreme Court, is one of very considerable importance to the mercantile community, more particularly to shopkeepers who may be remiss in keeping an account of their stock. Cook had a furnishing establishment at Ultimo; his stock being insured for £5000, £3000 with the company referred to. It seems that the proposal for this latter amount was accepted on the 26th July, 1882, and a fire destroyed the property on the 31st August of the same year. The company declined payment by pleading that Cook had failed to give a sufficiently reasonable account of the property burnt within fifteen days of the fire—one of the conditions attached to the policy. It appears that Cook only sent a bare account, referring defendants to the books for details. The company demanded and held the books from the 4th September to within a day or two of the expiry of the time within which the account was to be rendered. It was contended that in the circumstances the account was a reasonable one, but the Chief Justice held that there should be some statement, however imperfect, of the goods that were destroyed. A book might be entered, showing the goods received and delivered, so that in case of fire an estimate of the damage could be made. The books kept did not show what the stock was. He, for these reasons, granted a nonsuit. The case is one which should command the widest observation. How many shopkeepers are in a position to render particulars of their stock within a fortnight should it be destroyed by fire? Cases that came before the Courts show considerable laxity in this respect. To question the propriety of resisting a claim on technical grounds gives no consolation to a burnt-out storekeeper or his creditors. The giving up of the books to the insurance company before they had been used to make an account of the losses exhibited a trustfulness which is not likely to be shown in similar circumstances. People will rather hold their books and use them for their own advantage. Before availing of a technicality to resist a claim, it might have been expected that when the company received the bare account that was rendered they would have written to the claimant to tell him that it was insufficient, and given him an extension of the time to perfect it—an extension equivalent to the period during which they held the book. Technical points are no doubt often used to defeat unjust claims which cannot without them be resisted; but to have good ground for consideration, the parties using them should be able to say that there had been nothing in their conduct to bring about the conditions on which the technical points were raised.

In Victoria it is proposed to form a company to raise capital for the purchase of a complete salvage plant. Apparently the project has grown out of the rather numerous and important shipwrecks which have taken place down south during the past few months. Whatever may be thought about the causes leading to these fatalities, there can be no dissentient to the statement that the loss of property has been very great, and that with better appliances much of it might have been saved. Our Australian shores must not be understood to be so inhospitable, nor our skill in navigation so worthless, that a salvage company will soon make its fortune. This company may find its business remunerative, for unhappily there are more of these accidents of the sea than it is pleasant to review. But since no one can promise greater indemnity in the future, there is good reason to make the best preparation that can be made. Good lights along the coast and good pilotage at every port still leave ships at the mercy of the gales and currents which sweep along our extensive seaboard. It is when one of these disasters does befall us that we wake up to the fact that we have few, if any, really adequate appliances for salvage work. A good deal has been done to save life, but cargo too readily becomes wreckage. Some enterprising speculator, who can see salvage enough to cover the venture now and again makes an attempt to snatch something of cargo or ship from the sea; but his equipment is crude and insufficient. By this time it should be pretty well known what is needed under the name of salvage plant. It will be a more difficult matter to keep it in readiness for use. Too often when ships' lifeboats and other such apparatus are most needed they are found to be out of gear to an extent which makes them useless. It is the old story of long immunity from danger breeding neglect. The personal interests of a company might sharpen their vigilance. Fire brigades can keep all their gear taut and trip, and if a salvage company were based upon a footing similar to that of fire brigades it might do as well as if resting upon a strictly commercial basis. If capitalists who are entering upon this business may safely be left to watch their own interests, and underwriters to watch theirs, it may yet be as well for the Marine Board also to give an eye to it that no possible danger be left unguarded.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

During Mr. Gladstone's stay at Copenhagen the Czar of Russia and the King of Denmark lunched with him on board the vessel on which he has lately been cruising off the north-western coasts of Europe. Mr. Gladstone sailed for England the same afternoon. His returning so soon gave rise to groundless rumours and some commotion in England as to the result of his meeting with the Czar.

The Daily News of Tuesday has a leading article on the deportation of French criminals to the South Pacific, in which it urges the British Government to take steps to prevent the escape of convicts from French settlements and their taking refuge in Australia.

Miss Booth, one of the leaders of the Salvation Army, who was recently ordered by the Swiss Government to quit the country, has been imprisoned at Neufchatel because she refused to obey the order.

The position of the French at Tonquin has become critical, in consequence of the military officers having quarrelled amongst themselves. There is great excitement in France, and the people are clamouring for a convocation of the Chambers. Should the demand be acceded, to it is generally expected that a Ministerial crisis will ensue. The action of the French in destroying Loango has raised an agitation at Lisbon.

Miscellaneous items of news by cable report that extraordinary precautions have been taken by the London police, in consequence of the threat of the Irish Nationalists to rescue O'Donnell, the murderer of James Carey. Prisoner was brought up at Bow-street Police Court on Tuesday, and remanded. Severe fighting is going on among the natives of Ashantee. King Coffee Calcalli's forces have been defeated with great slaughter by the rebel forces. Respecting the anti-Magyar agitation at Croatia, latest accounts are more satisfactory. Further portions of the Cuzco's meat have been offered in the London market, and realised 4½d. for beef and 5d. per lb. for mutton.

A London telegram in yesterday's Herald states that the Public Debt Act is being put into force. The second reading of this measure was carried on the 8th August last, by 149 to 95. The object of the Act is not to alter the charge upon the taxpayer for the payment of the National debt, but to extend the operation of the sinking fund by a system of terminable annuities, under which the amount of debt paid off each year will annually increase. For a system of terminable annuities which comes to an end in 1885 is to be substituted one with an improved action, which, in the course of the next 20 years, will get rid of debt to the amount of more than a hundred and seventy millions.

We are informed by the hon. the Postmaster-General that the question of extending the penny postage system to Parramatta has received the favourable consideration of the Government, in view of the fact that Parramatta is, as regards the railway time table and fares and otherwise, treated as a suburb of Sydney; and the change will take place on the 1st proximo. It has also been determined, in fairness to other places within the same radius of distance from Sydney as Parramatta, that the system should be extended to those places from the same date.

An account of the earthquake at Ischia, compiled from various papers received by the last mail, appeared in Wednesday's Herald. In another column we give another account of this terrible visitation from our correspondent at Rome, which contains further particulars of the sufferings and rescue of some of the survivors who had been buried in the debris of the fallen houses.

Mr. F. M'Nab, Consul for the Netherlands, has received a telegram from Batavia, dated September 18, to the effect that the navigation of the Sunda Straits is now safe, excepting between the islands of Krakatoa and Sebessee. The lights at Java Heads and Varkenshook, on the Sumatra coast are burning: and the authorities will soon have a temporary light on Fourth Point.

The A. S. N. Company has received a cable announcing the departure from home of the Hesketh, sister ship to the Dingadee, and the launch of the Cahors, a fast steamer, intended for the Sydney and Brisbane line.

In the Banco Court yesterday, before his Honor the Chief Justice and a jury of four, the plaintiff recovered a verdict with £525 damages, being £390 on the value of the lease and £135 on the damage to goods, in the case of Fulton v. Kirkpatrick and others. The action was on a breach of an agreement entered into between the plaintiff, a draper at Bourke, and the defendants, who contracted to build a suitable place for plaintiff to carry on his business within a certain time. This they failed to do, and a large consignment of winter goods was injured and remained unsold owing to the defendants' conduct. The plaintiff had agreed to take the premises at a certain rent for the space of two years with the option of a third, and was compelled to rent others which were unsuitably situated. In Horgan v. Fulton, the plaintiff, who was a young lady in the employ of the plaintiff in the last case, recovered £12, the proportion of wages due to her after her dismissal from the defendant's employ. Before Mr. Justice Innes, a somewhat amusing action for slander occupied the Court on Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning. The plaintiff, who was a fruiterer in Carcoar, sued the defendant, a publican in the same place, for saying to him, in the presence of others, "You have no cause to be so smart over it; I could have had you in the lockup long ago over them blankets," and expressions of a similar nature, which meant that some years ago the plaintiff had stolen a pair of blankets from the defendant. The plaintiff had received at the time of the loss of the blankets an anonymous letter, which he imputed to the defendant, who, however, denied it. An ill-feeling arose between the parties owing to the defendant accidentally shooting a sheep which belonged to plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

The important will suit, M'Arthur and others v. Seccombe, came to a close yesterday, after a trial of seven days before his Honor Mr. Justice Faucett and a jury of four. The testator, Roger Seccombe, lived with his wife at Milton, on the southern coast, for 36 years, and then went to Mount Bischoff, Tasmania, in 1879, and kept an hotel with a Mrs. Tucker, a lady of 51, who had previously lived at Milton. In 1881 the pair returned to Sydney and were married by the Rev. T. Johnson, the lady being quite satisfied with testator's assurance that Mrs. Seccombe the first was not his wife. Testator and Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe then went to Dubbo and kept the Imperial Hotel, where he died eight months later, having made a will and two codicils, in which he spoke of his first wife by her maiden name, and made provision for her and all her family, but left Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe the hotels at Mount Bischoff and Dubbo. There were two issues—1, whether the testator was possessed of testamentary capacity when he executed the deeds in question; and, 2, whether they were obtained by undue influence on the part of Mrs. Tucker-Seccombe. Both issues were found in the affirmative, so that the defendant succeeded. His Honor remarked that there was no question that Mrs. Susan Ann Berry Seccombe was the testator's lawful wife. His Honor subsequently granted probate to the will of the late Archbishop Roger Bede Vaughan, the property being sworn under £61,828.

Now that the Murray river is in flood, the permanent railway bridge does not look so near completion as it did when the waters were lower. The bridge in fact presents the appearance of being intended to terminate in the middle of the river. The cause of this is very easily explained. When the plans of the bridge were prepared, the most southerly pier was within a reasonable distance of the Victorian bank. Since then, and during the progress of the contract for extending the Victorian line from Wodonga to the Murray, large quantities of gravel have been removed from the southern bank, thus practically increasing the width of the channel, or at all events of the length to be bridged. The contractor has not yet received any instructions to sink another pair of cylinders. The approaches on the New South Wales side are progressing fairly well, but no commencement has yet been made with the viaduct on the Victorian side.

After a couple of days of fine weather, another change took place yesterday. The morning was close and oppressive, and in the afternoon the sky became overcast, and by dusk was quite obscured by heavy masses of clouds. Rain began to fall at about 8 o'clock, and continued up till midnight, with every prospect of a continuance. It held up at that hour, but the weather was still very threatening.

On Monday afternoon last, prior to the meeting of the Calcutta Exhibition Commission, a meeting of the Amsterdam Exhibition Commission was held, at which, in the unavoidable absence of the president, Sir John Hay, K.C.M.G., M.L.C., the chair was taken by Mr. Edward Combes, C.M.G., M.L.A., vice-president. There were also present Mr. R. D. Adams, Hon. G. H. Cox Mr. J. Davies, Mr. E. Fosbery, Mr. J. H. Heaton, Mr. C. Moore, Mr. C. J. Roberts, Mr. R. Burdett-Smith. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The honorary secretary then read correspondence which had been forwarded to the commission through the Colonial Secretary's Department, including extracts from letter from Mr. Bonnard to Mr. Darley, late representative commissioner for the colony at the Bordeaux Wine Exhibition, written at Amsterdam, and containing references to the finished appearance of the New South Wales court; correspondence between Sir Samuel and Mr. Bonnard on matters connected with the appointment of jurors for New South Wales exhibits, and the adjustment of claims for fitting up the court; also report from the Hon. Thomas Holt, M.L.C., dealing with the same subjects, and stating that on the 24th July he gave a well-attended dinner to the jurors. There was also read a letter from Mr. Edgar Ray, secretary of an International and Colonial Exhibition to be held next year in London, forwarded to the commission through the Principal Under-Secretary, asking for the transference of exhibits now at Amsterdam to such exhibition. It was decided that as arrangements had already been made for the disposal of exhibits from Government departments, and also of those sent to Amsterdam by private exhibitors, the request could not be entertained. A request from the Calcutta Exhibition Commission for the transference of cases, flags, and other court decorations from Amsterdam to Calcutta was agreed to, on condition that the Amsterdam commission is to be paid a portion of the original cost of such fittings as may be selected. The secretary produced a synopsis of the awards as given in press telegrams, but it was decided that, as it was not an official list, it could not be formally received by the meeting.

The public meeting in connection with the proposed memorial to the late Archbishop Vaughan, as will be seen by the advertisement, takes place this evening. We understand that Dr. Murray, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Maitland, will preside, and Mr. Justice Faucett, Sir Patrick Jennings, Dr. Donovan, and several other well-known gentlemen will speak to the resolutions. Much enthusiasm has been already manifested in the matter, and a very successful result is anticipated by the committee.

There is no abatement whatever of either the interest taken in, or the success attending Mrs. Hampson's Mission Services. Last evening the old Exhibition-building, in which seats are provided for about 5000 persons, was thronged, and a number of persons were unable to gain admittance. Mrs. Hampson delivered a very impressive address upon the words, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." At the close of the address a very large number of persons repaired to the inquirers' rooms.

The Marine Board finished yesterday their visit of inspection to the lighthouses and pilot stations on the coast south of Sydney. They left Shoalhaven at 8 o'clock in the morning, arrived at Kiama at half-past 10, and spent an hour at the pilot station there. Everything was found to be in good order, and the Bega then steamed to Sydney, arriving at the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company's Wharf shortly before 6 p.m.

The sale of useful and fancy articles in connection with the Baptist Church, Hill-street, Leichhardt, was closed on Saturday night last, after being open for three days, and notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather and the number of counter attractions, the attendance was very fair. The church was tastefully decorated, and the stalls dressed to the best advantage. The ladies presiding acted with their usual tact and ability. Refreshments were provided, and vocal and instrumental music was performed, and altogether an enjoyable time was spent.

"A Graduate" writes expressing his pleasure at the determination of the Organ Committee to institute free organ recitals on the University organ on alternate Saturday afternoons. The large attendance in the hall on last Saturday afternoon was, he thought, proof that the action of the committee met with warm approval. He congratulates the committee on having secured the services of such an organist as Mr. Rea, and suggests certain improvements with reference to the organ, such as a small gas engine, to be used instead of manual power for blowing the organ; also a screen to prevent the light through the great window dazzling the organist's eyes: and, in conclusion, hopes that before long a class of music may be established in connection with the University.

We have received a letter from Mr. Thomas Sinclair on the subject of the "Rabbit Nuisance." The writer states his views as those of "a practical rabbiter." He regrets that the bonus system for scalps has been abandoned by the Government, as many persons are thus deprived of what before was an incentive to them to destroy rabbits, and consequently take no interest in their destruction. The accurate account required to be kept, and the clerical labour involved in the matter, prevents, he thinks, many free-selectors and their sons from benefiting by the present subsidy system. It would, he is of opinion, be very much better if Government allowed these people a bonus on the scalps, as it would encourage them to destroy the rabbits, and the production of the scalps be proof that they were being destroyed. Our correspondent thinks the trap to be the only effectual way of destroying the rabbit.

Mr. Edward J. H. Knapp writes on the subject of "Parks for our Southern Suburbs and North Shore." On the subject of the southern suburbs he asks why does not the Minister for Lands take possession of the strip of Crown land lying between the southern boundary of the Waterloo Estate and those grants laid out about seven chains further to the south. This land extends from Shea's creek easterly about three miles to the Bunnerong-road; the area being about 170 acres. He states that for many years past it has been known, through a survey made by the writer's father in 1844, that this was Crown land. It could be portioned out into parks for Waterloo, Alexandria, Randwick, &c., and thus save the country thousands of pounds which might otherwise be expended in resuming land for such purposes. On the subject of parks at North Shore he states that an attempt is now being made by certain persons to obtain a certificate of title to about 100 acres of Crown land on the Lane Cove-road, situated in the most beautiful part of that suburb. Near St. John's Hill there is also, he says, a block of 95 acres of land, which for years was thought to be private land, but is in reality Crown land, and which should in his opinion be at once secured for public recreation purposes. Mr. Knapp thinks it would be worth the while of the inhabitants referred to, to urge their members to look into these facts in order to secure the lands for public use, and he intimates his willingness to give them any help in his power to do so.

We have received the fourth annual report of the New South Wales mission for teaching the blind to read. From this report we learn that the finances of the mission are in a more flourishing condition than they have been since the mission was instituted in the year 1877. The total contributions from subscribers and friends last year amounted to £164 6s. The society now possesses, in Dr. Moon's and M. Braille's types, a total of 336 volumes, all of which, excepting 20 volumes expected to arrive shortly, are in the mission library. The present total number of blind persons now enjoying the benefits of the society is 98.

We have received a letter from a correspondent, suggesting that it would be a good idea if we held in this colony, as had been held in England, a Builders' Exhibition, which would be an incentive to the trades for good work, and would develop skill and good workmanship. The various trades, such as workers in stone, wood, and plaster, brickmakers and potters, and all other departments of the building trade, would be represented; also, the house decorators, cabinetmakers, and so on. He thinks that the arousing of a spirit of emulation amongst the various trades would greatly develope and improve them.

The Animals' Protection Society is evidently doing good work in the community by investigating and bringing to justice cases of the grossest cruelty. Yesterday's record of the Police Court shows that, unfortunately, there is a large amount of work for the society to do. There were some six or seven prosecutions, and in two cases the heartlessness of two offenders was made most apparent. In one case it was proved that a person named Alfred Mancer had, without any reason whatever, kicked his horse in the belly. Mr. Clarke, S.M., showed his abhorrence of the crime by imposing a fine of £5 and costs. In another case, a person named Donald Anderson was brought before the Court for working a horse (which looked like a walking skeleton) whilst it was suffering from a large wound on the back. Mr. Crane, S.M., said he was surprised that the defendant was not ashamed to work a horse in that state, and imposed a fine of £3.

A man named Frederick Rose was brought before the Central Police Court yesterday, on a charge of having assaulted and robbed a Chinaman named Tiy Hing of the sum of £25 10s.; and a woman named Margaret Pring, alias Mary Amelia Smith, was charged with having aided and abetted in the commission of the crime. It appeared that the prosecutor contemplated marriage with the woman Pring. He showed her a sum of money, with which he intended to procure the furniture, and she, he stated, accepted his suit. She, however, proposed a second meeting, at which they were to make final arrangements with respect to the proposed marriage. The second meeting was held on Sunday evening, and the Chinaman was imprudent enough to take the money with him. He asserts that he met the woman Pring, and had walked a short distance with her, when four larrikins attacked him, and he was robbed of £25 10s. He identified the prisoner Rose as one of his assailants and as the man who robbed him. Both prisoners were committed for trial.

The adjourned inquest on the body of the woman Elizabeth Phillips, who died in the hospital last week, will be resumed by the City Coroner, at his chambers, this morning. It will be remembered that the deceased was found in an unconscious state in a yard off Bourke-street on Tuesday week last, and was conveyed to the hospital, where she expired shortly after admission. The inquiry into the circumstances connected with her death was initiated on Thursday last, when a good deal of evidence of a very conflicting nature was taken, including the testimony of a man named Edward Williams, who was subsequently, by the direction of the coroner, taken into custody upon suspicion of having contributed to the death of the woman, and the inquest was adjourned for a week. During the past few days the police have been making further inquiries, and it is stated that the man Williams now in custody has turned Queen's evidence, and supplied information which has led to the apprehension of two other men, who are also in custody, and will be in attendance at the Coroner's Court to-day.

About 11 o'clock yesterday morning a man named William Townsend, employed at Byrne's coal yard, Circular Quay, found the dead body of a woman floating in the water on the east side of Sydney Cove. He immediately reported the matter to the Water Police, and the body was subsequently recovered and removed to the Circular Quay morgue. The name of the deceased is not known, and the police are anxious to obtain any information which may lead to her identification. She appears to be a young woman, not more than 20 years of age, is 5 feet 5 inches in height, and has long black hair, cut short in front. She was dressed in a dark puce dress trimmed with velvet, dark tweed and red flannel petticoat, white calico chemise marked "J. Kay," dark tweed corsets, dark green stockings, yellow straw hat trimmed with white silk, white feather, and blue lining. She was also wearing elastic-side boots. The matter has been reported to the City Coroner, and a magisterial inquiry will probably be held on the body to-day by Mr. W. T. Pinhey, J.P.

On the 15th instant, at Darlington Point, a publican was fined £5, with costs, for having supplied a member of the Warangesda Mission with intoxicating liquor.

On the 12th instant a dead body was found floating down the river at Darlington Point. The body was quite naked, and on the 14th instant, we are informed, was tied to a stake on the river bank, waiting the holding of an inquest.

A copy of the Albany Mail, containing a report of a meeting held there on the 30th ultimo, at which a coaling company was formed, has been forwarded to us by Mr. R. Septimus Pryce. The object of the company is to secure a constant and sufficient supply of coal for steamers calling at that port. At the meeting Captain Allan, of the steamer Gulf of Mexico, said he thought a hulk that would carry 2000 tons of coal could be bought for £700 or £1000, and best coals be obtained at Newcastle at 8s. a ton, and the freight would be about £1 a ton. Steamers would be very glad to get coal at 45s. He had paid as much as 65s. a ton here for it, so there would be a very large margin for profit. If vessels could get coal at Albany at the same price as Adelaide, they would rather take a couple of hundred tons extra than coal at Adelaide. He was sure that numbers of steamers would call at Albany for coal if they could get it in large quantities and with despatch. Captain Evans, of the steamer Coniston, supported Captain Allan's statements. The company formed has a capital of £5000, in 2500 shares of £2 each, of which 491 were subscribed for during the meeting. Captains Allan and Evans were empowered to enter into negotiations for a hulk at Melbourne, Sydney, or Newcastle. Captain Allan, on this trip, was delayed three days at Albany before he could induce a holder of coal to allow him barely sufficient for steaming purposes to Adelaide; and it was stated that "stringent means to obtain the supply" had to be resorted to.

Mr. Holbrow, M.L.A., addressed the electors of Argyle on Saturday evening last at Marulan, and in the course of his address (an abstract of which is given in the Southern Free Press), said:—"I shall certainly look to the Ministry to introduce a bill to deal with the law of libel and contempt of Court. You have seen the treatment that the Herald in Sydney has met with, and I am sure you will agree with me that if such a state of things is allowed to continue, all sorts of public abuses will be permitted to go on unchecked. I do not mean to say that I desire to give the press unlimited license. In the hands of such papers as we have in Sydney, or such as are published in this district, we are safe enough; but you know as well as I do there are some newspaper proprietors who, from private spleen, will hound a man down and attack his private character, and this is what we require to legislate against."

The "Fiji missionaries" who objected to Mr. Paton's remarks as to the sources from which they derive their living and wealth, and who requested the general secretary of the Mission Board in Sydney to write asking for an explanation, have (says the Fiji Times) received a reply to the effect that Mr. Paton states he did not mean them, but the "Fiji planters." Mr. Parr, in answering his former letter, denied that Fiji planters were in the habit of ill-using their labourers, and referred him to the Revs. Langham, Fison, and Webb for confirmation. Mr. Paton replied that "Fiji missionaries" had their living and wealth by the traffic, and therefore made the least possible of its evils; ergo their testimony in its favour would be self-interested, and therefore unreliable. Now Mr. Paton says he meant "planters," not "missionaries;" but if so, where is the force of the remark? What does Mr. Paton mean? Is he in the habit of writing missionaries for planters and vice versa? if so, it will throw an entirely new light on his labour letters.

The higher the standard of education at home (observes an English paper) the more will our colonies like it. Recently there has been an outcry against "over-education" or "over-pressure" in our elementary schools, but it may fairly be replied to those who advance this argument that it applies less to a reduction in the intellectual demands upon the children than to an improvement in their physical condition. "Our standards," as Sir Lyon Playfair points out, "are age for age the lowest in Europe." Therefore we need have no fear, in respect of the rising generation, of their suffering from pressure on account of mental work.

Public opinion (says Vanity Fair) runs high against the English on the French Bench which learns that instructions have been issued for the enforcement of an old section of the code which empowers a magistrate to refuse to entertain any case in which a foreigner is prosecutor unless a sufficient sum to defray the expenses of the defence is lodged in the "caisse de consignation" of the court. In fact, it is well nigh impossible for an Englishman to get any justice at all in the minor courts in France.

Certain continental peoples (remarks an English paper) look with anything but approval on the exploits of Mr. Henry M. Stanley in Africa. That gentleman, they say, not satisfied with his fame as an explorer and the money he receives as the agent of the international committee is setting up as a monarch. He has already signed treaties with King Jongo de Saio and the Sovereign of Manganya. In exchange for the promise of an annual pension of sundry pieces of cloth, he has obtained from these potentates the right to trade and settle in the country, and to demand the services of any labourers he may require. The privilege of framing such contracts is restricted to governing Powers alone, and thus, by a stroke of his pen, the ex-correspondent of a New York paper constitutes himself a monarch. Stanley the First conducts himself as if "native, and to the manner born;" has his body-guard of Zanzibarians armed with breechloaders, and sways it over the natives autocratically. The Italie is witty at the expense of the new dynasty; but there is a lurking annoyance underneath the jocularity. Bernadotte was the son of an advocate, and Murat of an innkeeper; Bonaparte was a subaltern of artillery; but it has been reserved for the last quarter of the nineteenth century to constitute the press a nursery of royalty. We trust that from his palace on the banks of the Congo the ruler who has exchanged the pencil for the sceptre will exhibit to his neighbours a pattern of mildness and justice. This is what comes of pioneering and opening up new trade routes.

In the midst of his labours in a very different direction, such as the inspection of hospitals for the insane, and lunatic asylums in America and Europe, Dr. Tucker has found time to help forward the welfare of the colony in another way than by the great store of information he his collecting to bring back to us for the adoption of the latest and best systems in the management of our institutions for that portion of our community suffering from mental disorder and disease. He has printed a pamphlet containing a compilation of "Facts about New South Wales, and information for intending immigrants," contributed by him to the Boston (U.S.) Herald. The doctor is no half-hearted advocate of the bounty of our land. He says, "New South Wales is a country within whose limits everything is found that man needs, either to create comfort or enhance luxury, or that he can possibly want under any conceivable conditions." He then goes on to state that the one only thing required is a greater population to develope its wealth. The extent of land, the revenue, the railways, the navigable length of river communication, the land system, and the mineral resources of the colony are dwelt upon, and the regulations under which immigration is carried out are explained. Altogether the doctor has succeeded in gathering together a mass of facts in a small compass that give the reader a just and fair idea of our resources and capabilities, and which at the time of their publication must have done much to make the American people better acquainted with their "Australian cousins."

The alliance between Austria and Germany (observes the Pall Mall Gazette) has come to be regarded as such a matter of course that the annual meeting of the two Emperors, which is its outward and visible sign, fails now to excite much interest. There is nothing in the circumstances of the time to give this year's meeting any unusual importance. The Continent is quiet, and as long as it remains quiet there is no special occasion for solicitude on the part of the Powers whose one great object is to keep it so. But, unobtrusive as it is, the alliance is of singular closeness and vitality. The success which has attended the pacific and conservative policy of the two empires, and the unmistakable advantages accruing to both parties therefrom, promise a long continuance of the present friendship. Unlike the understanding which so long existed between Russia and Germany, this alliance is independent of the personal affection of the two Sovereigns, and is based solely on high reasons of State. But these reasons will retain unabated force as long as the great Balkan question awaits its final solution. And that is, for all practical purposes, till the Greek Kalends.

A London paper says:—"There seems to be a difference of opinion between the medical authorities at West Ham as to the effect of heaps of rubbish, such as 'road sweepings, the matter ordinarily taken from street gullies, decayed vegetable matter, fish-heads, lobster-tins, &c.,' upon the health of the surrounding locality. The gentleman outside whose factories these miscellaneous matters were accumulated, together with several medical officers, took an unfavourable view of them. The depositors, on the other hand, were of the impression that 'the stuff, being placed on the marsh, would do good.' Another witness declared that it was excellent as a disinfectant, and the medical officer for Mile End Old Town, believing that West Ham would be all the better for more dust, is apparently of the same opinion."

As previously announced, the second monthly meeting of the Geographical Society of Australasia will take place this evening at the Free Public Library, at which a paper on the inhabitants of the islands in Torres Straits and the south-east coast of New Guinea, illustrated with sketches, will be read. We are desired to remind members that they are invited to make use of their privilege of introducing visitors.

In our report of the fire which occurred on Monday night at Messrs. Nicolle, Wetherill, and Co.'s warehouse (the lower portion of which is occupied by Mr. G. H. Adams), it is stated the value of Mr. Adams' stock is £3000 to £4000, and that it was uninsured. Mr. Adams informs us that the stock was valued at close upon £6000, and was insured for the full amount, as follows:—Sun Fire Office, £2000; Alliance Fire Office, £2000; and Lion Fire Office, £2000.

The hearing of the charges preferred against the Rev. Charles Strong will be resumed by the Melbourne Presbytery to-day. It was inadvertently stated in a news paragraph yesterday that the proceedings were adjourned till Wednesday.

EXTRAORDINARY BANK ROBBERY.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

An extraordinary robbery from the Commercial Bank, Melbourne, has been reported to the police. The case presents very mysterious features. It appears that last evening Mr. G. D. Pinnock, the manager of the Ballarat branch of the bank, came to town by the last train from Ballarat in charge of a large quantity of bar gold, intended to be taken to the Mint. He also had some used-up bank notes, to be returned to the bank in Melbourne. Altogether there were 16 bars of gold, each weighing 1972oz., and about 1000 mutilated notes which had been withdrawn from circulation. The fact of his coming down was presumed to be only known to the proper officers of the bank, and to a messenger named A. Carter, who was to receive the Ballarat manager with his treasure, and assist him in placing it in a proper place of security. Immediately on Mr. Pinnock arriving at the bank the gold and notes were taken to the strong room. Here the bars of gold were carefully counted, and the number found to be correct, and they were then placed in the strong room by the manager and the messenger. The former then locked the room and took away the key; but there was also a duplicate key. This strong room had two doors, one of which was an iron grating. There was in it one safe, which had the newest patent locks, and this safe was securely fixed last night. This morning, however, on Mr. Pinnock going to the bank, he went at once to the strong room, and noticed that the place was locked, but there was a little grit in the lock, which caused some trouble in opening the door. Upon entering the room he was amazed to find that someone had been there before him, who had taken some of the gold from the safe. On counting it he found 14 bars had been taken, leaving only two. The mutilated notes also were gone. Telegrams were at once exchanged with Ballarat, and it was ascertained that the notes stolen represented £670, and not £1200, as was at first supposed. A careful inspection of every portion of the bank premises showed that there were absolutely no signs of any burglary having been committed. The back of the bank was protected by a high wall covered with broken bottles. All the gates and doors were securely locked, and as an additional precaution near the strong room a watch-dog was kept. All the appearances indicated that the strong room had been in some way opened by a duplicate or skeleton key. About three years ago a box containing 1000 sovereigns was stolen from the bank, and then suspicion fell on the teller. He stated he had placed the bag containing the money on the floor of his room, after which it had disappeared in a most mysterious manner. The teller lost his position through the affair. There is a strong suspicion that both that robbery and to-day's affair were committed by the same hand. The matter has been placed in the hands of detectives Nixon, Considine, and Ward, who are now making inquiry into what seems to be a remarkably mysterious robbery.

THE FRENCH IN TONQUIN.

LONDON, Sept. 18.

The French position at Tonquin has become extremely critical. The gravity of the situation has been intensified by military squabbles. The French people are alarmed, and are clamouring that the Government should convoke the Chambers. Should this demand of the populace be acceded to, it is generally expected that the fall of the Ministry will ensue.

MR. GLADSTONE'S RETURN TO ENGLAND.

LONDON, Sept. 18.

The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone has left Copenhagen on his return to England, having derived much benefit from his cruise. While at Copenhagen, Mr. Gladstone met the Czar of Russia, who is at present paying a visit to his father-in-law, the King of Denmark, and the intelligence of his early departure from Copenhagen gave rise to some commotion in London. The facts are these:—The Czar of Russia and the King of Denmark lunched with Mr. Gladstone on Tuesday on board the vessel in which he has been cruising on the north-western coast of Europe, and the English Premier sailed for England the same afternoon. There is, however, nothing to cause any uneasiness as to the relations between England and Russia.

FRANCE AND PORTUGAL.

LONDON, Sept. 18.

There is a popular agitation at Lisbon respecting the recent conduct of the French in burning the town of Loanga, on the west coast of Africa.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The Premier has received a copy of a resolution carried at a meeting at Buninyong in favour of the annexation of the New Hebrides, as being the only means of protecting the natives of those islands.

At the Central Criminal Court to-day, J. A. Smith, who is charged with stealing a number of registered letters, was placed on his trial, but was remanded, as he had only been committed a few days ago.

A further application was made to Mr. Justice Williams this morning, in the divorce case of Bolam v. Bolam, that the costs given against Mrs. Bolam, in a previous application, should not be imposed. The former decision of the Court, however, was adhered to with further costs against the applicant.

All work at the wreck of the George Roper was stopped some time ago, and it is now stated that the intention of the syndicate which bought it is to sell the wreck by auction, also what is left of the wreck of the steamer Blackboy.

The Lowan Shire Council has unanimously passed a resolution urging the Government to take steps to have the real ownership of the strip of land in dispute between Victoria and South Australia settled. They think the strip in question contains enough land to permanently settle a large population on it, but if the Shire Council effects improvements it does so at its own risk; and further, if this strip of land is thrown open to selection it will be eagerly taken up by South Australian selectors, as it contains some of the finest land in the Tatiara district.

A meeting of representatives of different fire brigades was held this evening, when it was arranged that the annual demonstration should take place at Geelong next year. The Buninyong Brigade was censured for burning an effigy of the captain of a Sandhurst brigade.

The Volunteer officers have sent a long letter to the Premier, reviewing the defence scheme of the Government.

A nugget weighing 30oz. has been found near Allendale, on a road where mullock had been thrown.

Mr. Cosmo Newbery, scientific superintendent of the Technological Museum, has invented an apparatus for destroying noxious gases from bone crushing and similar works, and utilising the waste. It has been tried, and found to work well.

An old man named Parker, aged 65, an inmate of the Ballarat Benevolent Asylum, was run over this morning by a train near the Ballarat station.

A stone axe, about six inches long, evidently an aboriginal implement, and ingeniously made, has been found near Hamilton.

A young woman, Mrs. Harbinger, the wife of a blacksmith residing near Nhill, has been absent from her home for some days. It is now supposed that she has committed suicide.

The Government has promised to make the usual arrangements for the conveyance of the firemen's apparatus for the next Fire Brigades' demonstration.

A complete schedule in the estate of the firm of Hemmons, Laws, and Co., chemists, has been filed. The debts unsecured to creditors amount to £23,550. Among the creditors are Messrs. J. H. Faulding and Co., of Adelaide, the Union Bank, and the Bank of New South Wales. In two years prior to their insolvency the firm lost £10,801, of which £2000 was by a recent fire. The assets are £20,579.

At the Tariff Commission meeting to-day, a motion by Mr. M'Intyre censuring the chairman for writing to the press, was ruled out of order and irrelevant. Mr. M'Intyre then moved that this ruling be disagreed with, which was carried by 5 to 1, and Mr. M'Intyre's other motion in a modified form was also carried. Material progress was then made with the draft reports, Mr. Mirams consenting to material reductions in the duties. The sections relating to wearing apparel, woollen goods, millinery, &c., were disposed of.

The Harbour Trust to-day decided to accept tenders for the supply of 6000 piles monthly, at a cost of £10,000, to be used for the construction of one of Sir John Coode's docks; also, to extend the Sandridge Town Pier. Some important proposals regarding the continuing of the cut across Fishermen's Bend were postponed for further consideration.

The National Agricultural Society to-day resolved to ask the Government to give free passages to the Judges from New South Wales who attend the next show. Mr. L. L. Smith gave notice of his intention to call attention to the disastrous effects of destroying timber, and that he would suggest means for a remedy.

The Titles Office Inquiry Board took further evidence to-day. Witnesses representing the Institute of Surveyors complained of the loose manner adopted of preparing certificates of title, which in many cases were inaccurate.

The signalman lately employed at Newmarket station, who is charged with neglect of duty in connection with the recent collision, has been discharged; his Honor Judge Williams, who heard the case, expressing his opinion that the engine-driver was to blame. His Honor, however, at the time he uttered this opinion, did not know that the case against the engine-driver was to be heard immediately after, and when it came on he adjourned it.

The death has been reported of a girl named Florence Blanche, at Waddilor, under very strange circumstances. The girl, who had been employed as a barmaid in the Flinders-street station, went away from her home ostensibly to visit her friends. She went, however, to the house of a Mrs. Taylor at Richmond, who figured in an unpleasant case not long ago. The girl went there for nursing and gradually grew worse, and despite the attention of a doctor she died on Monday. At the request of the girl's mother the medical man gave a certificate of death as peritonitis; but the case came under the notice of the police authorities, who ordered an inquest to be held. The deceased was a respectable and well-connected girl.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Wednesday.

Mr. A. H. Wilson, of Maryborough, and Mr. W. G. Power, of Brisbane, have been appointed members of the Upper House.

The immigrants by the Duke of Westminster (s.) will be released from quarantine on Monday.

The total crushings at Gympie for the month of August reached 5145 tons, which yielded 4535oz. of gold. This does not include the recent rich crushing from the Wilmot Extended claim.

The strike of workmen at the Queensland Land and Coal Company's mine, Burrum, continues. The question at issue is now the payment of wages.

The Katoomba (s.), while proceeding north, picked up two Italians on Dent Island, and landed them at Bowen. They state that they left Mackay on a fishing excursion two months ago, and were wrecked at Hamilton Island. They swam thence to Dent Island. A third man, who was with them, was drowned.

The Hon. John Douglas addressed a large meeting at Toowoomba to-night, and was accorded a good reception.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Wednesday.

At an extraordinary meeting to-day of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of South Australia it was decided that the directors had acted prematurely in their proposed amalgamation with the Victorian Mutual Company, and the shareholders are to be fully informed before the matter is finally settled.

The Chief Justice delivered his reserved judgment this morning in the case of the Attorney-General v. Charnock, which was an appeal from a judgment given by Mr. Justice Boucaut for £6000 damages on the trial of a claim to recover the value of a barge lent by the Government to assist in floating the steamship Sorata, which stranded on a rock at Cape Jervis in October, 1880. The appeal was dismissed.

The case of John Newman, who was committed for trial about five weeks ago on a charge of embezzling over £1500 from the Prospect and Nailsworth Tramway Company, has been settled by the directors accepting repayment of the money, and their undertaking not to proceed any further in the matter.

A meeting is to be held to establish a fund to procure a portrait of Dr. Schomburgk, to be placed in the Botanical Museum.

His Excellency the Governor returned yesterday from Rottnest, and proceeds on a visit to Champion Bay.

Numerous applications are being received for the immigration agency.

PUBLIC OPINION ON THE LIBEL LAW.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondents.)

FORBES, Wednesday.

The Mayor has convened a public meeting with a view to support the action taken in Sydney against the recent decisions of the Supreme Court with regard to the Herald libel and contempt cases. The feeling against the action of the Judges is even stronger in the country than in Sydney.

NEWCASTLE, Wednesday.

A public meeting of citizens, convened by the Mayor, is to be held on Wednesday next at the City Hall, Newcastle, to consider the circular sent to the borough council by the Sydney central committee with respect to obtaining amendments in the libel law and practice in contempt of Court cases. Messrs. J. Fletcher and J. C. Ellis, Ms.L.A., are expected to be amongst the speakers.

PLOUGHING MATCH AT ORANGE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

ORANGE, Wednesday.

The ploughing matches which came off to-day were a great success, and attracted a large concourse of spectators. There was good competition. The following were the results:—Champion, double furrow—J. Edwards of Bathurst. Champion, single furrow—G. Weily, 1; John Stranger, 2; C. Lang, 3. All-comers Match, single furrow—G. Church, 1; J. Weily, 2. All-comers, double furrow—J. Ginns, 1; Schofield, 2; J. Jeffrey, 3. Youths Match—Joseph Warboys, 1; G. Baker, 2. There was an excellent show of plough and agricultural machinery. The horse parade was very good. A prize was awarded to Keay's Tasman and to Taylor's Prince Charlie, the latter being second.

PARLIAMENT OF VICTORIA.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

In the Assembly, the Hon. James Service replying to Mr. Richardson, said the course contemplated by the French Government in exiling criminals to the Pacific Islands had caused considerable anxiety and reasonable alarm, and no step would be left untaken by the Government, and under special instructions the Agent-General had pressed the question on the attention of the Imperial authorities. Members should induce their constituents, by holding public meetings on the matter, to strengthen the hands of the Government. The recent Ballarat case, where a French criminal had been arrested for burglary, in itself showed the danger the colonies would be in if the refuse of France were sent out to the Pacific Islands. Mr. T. Cooper said he thought the House should intimate to the Imperial Government that if they did not protect the colonies they would separate. (Cries of "No, no.") He moved the adjournment of the House. Major Smith promised the Government the fullest co-operation; but he had no sympathy with persons who talked of "cutting the painter." The colonies, having refused to receive English criminals, certainly would not allow foreign criminals to come here. He much regretted that the Earl of Derby had not rightly understood the feelings of the colonies. Mr. Wood hoped that the suggestion as to separation was only a slip of the tongue. Were it not for British protection the colonies would be put to enormous expense to defend their shores. The people, if necessary, must speak out firmly and decidedly against the policy of the Colonial Office regarding the Pacific Islands. Mr. W. F. Walker thought that sufficient allowances had not been made for the difficulties surrounding the question. The opposition on the part of the Imperial Government did not, he thought, arise from lukewarmness, but owing to the terms of the arrangement entered into between England and France. Mr. C. H. Pearson said he imagined that Mr. Cooper had only meant that the time had come for taking stronger measures. If the French Government sent out their criminals to the Pacific islands, communication with their colonies should be restricted. Mr. Service said this country had no sympathy with any proposal for separation from the mother country. In his opinion the alleged understanding with France was hazy, and apparently unwritten. Since 1878, when the agreement was said to have been made, the French had seized on one neutral island. Their hideous intention to send out a number of criminals ought to break up any such arrangement. It was a matter of life or death to Australia. They must draw a protective cordon round Australia if transportation of French criminals were carried out as contemplated. Mr. Cooper explained that separation would only be thought of if the French seized these islands and the Imperial Government in such case refused to interfere. The motion for adjournment was then put and negatived. The Mallee Leases Bill was further considered. An important condition was proposed by Mr. A. L. Tucker, Minister for Crown Lands, as an addition to clause 10, enabling the Crown to resume possession of a block on giving three years' notice and paying compensation, not only for the lessee's interest, but also for improvements effected. This new condition was ultimately agreed to. The Hon. J. G. Francis, member for Warrnambool, who had a serious illness in April last, which lasted for several months, attended the House to-day for the first time this session. He remained for a short time only. The rest of the clauses of the Mallee Bill were agreed to, with amendments. The Hon. G. B. Kerferd intimated that a vote would be taken on the B block question on Tuesday next. The Council's amendments on the Tramway Company's Bill were agreed to respecting forfeited shares, and the Bill was read a second time. The Literary Institution Incorporation Bill was read a third time. Mr. Shiel's Marriage and Divorce Bill passed through committee, divorce to a wife being allowed where her husband had committed adultery with her sisters, or with any person in the conjugal home, or under aggravating circumstances. The Hon. H. G. Wrixon moved the second reading of the County Court Judges Tenure Bill. After a lengthy discussion the House was counted out at 1 o'clock.

PARLIAMENT OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

ADELAIDE, Wednesday.

Upon the Legislative Assembly meeting to-day, the Chief Secretary made a statement to the House regarding the position of the Government relative to the taxation question. He moved the adjournment of the House until Tuesday next, so as to give both the Government and the Opposition a fair opportunity to consider the position. On the previous night, of course, the principal and only operative clause in the Taxation Bill had been rejected, and the Government proposed to ask the House on Tuesday to agree to the re-insertion of that clause substantially as amended before its rejection. He could not speculate upon the probable or possible result of a fresh vote upon the matter, and he would not then comment upon the character of the division which had been taken on Tuesday night, late. However, he darkly hinted at the probability of an appeal to the country in the event of another defeat being recorded against the Government upon this question. The result of that appeal, he felt confident, would be a triumph for the Ministry. The leader of the Opposition seemed equally confident that his party would be victorious. The Hon. J. Colton, in seconding the motion, said the Government had got themselves into their present fix by pressing on the taxation clause on Tuesday in spite of the advice of several members that they ought not to go on in the way they had adopted. He closed his speech by prophesying that the result of the vote to be given on the taxation scheme on Tuesday next would not be different from that of yesterday. This seemed to be the general opinion, and the motion was carried. The Standing Orders Committee, who were desired by the House to consider the standing orders enabling a single member to exclude all strangers at any time, reported that they could not recommend an alteration in the rule. The consideration of their report was fixed for Tuesday next. Subsequently the Hon. J. Colton moved the discharge from the business paper of the motion about the social purity question, which gave rise to another exclusion of strangers. He intends, however, to reintroduce the question, and it is understood that no opposition will then be offered to a public debate on the matter. Meanwhile numerous petitions are coming to the House in favour of laws for the better conservation of social purity. A resolution was passed authorising a flying survey of a railway 100 miles north-west of Port Augusta to Phillips Ponds, with a view of connecting that locality with the Great Northern Railway.

MR. T. GARRETT AND THE HERALD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I hasten to fully admit that I was in error in making the statement in my speech at Campbelltown last Saturday night, as to you having approved or justified the mode of so-called trial adopted and taken in the Legislative Assembly in regard to the accused members in the Milburn Creek case. The reference was made on the spur of the moment, without inquiry or investigation, or even more consideration than a speaker can give to a sudden thought that may strike him whilst speaking. Many of your contemporaries did justify the mode of procedure, and I am sorry that I should have confounded you with them.

I am, &c., THOS. GARRETT.

NEWCASTLE, Wednesday.

A thunderstorm burst over the city about 8 o'clock, and rain has continued to fall since. The sea is calm outside.

The arrangements for the reception of the Ministers expected here on Monday, were finally completed by the committee to-day.

GRAFTON, Wednesday.

Two men, named Bradfield and Herbert, have been arrested on suspicion of having cut the rope which was fixed to the beacon at the Clarence Heads last Monday. The information leading to their arrest comes from a blackfellow, who alleges that he saw the men together, one of them having a piece of rope in his hand, when they came to the camp to ask the blacks to assist in launching their boat. These men have been brought up at the Rocky Mouth Police Court.

FORBES, Wednesday.

A coroner's inquest was held to-day on the body of Hugh Lockrey, one of Messrs. Hoffnung's travellers, who was killed yesterday in a buggy accident. The jury returned a verdict death from fracture of the skull accidentally received. The remains, enclosed in a leaden coffin, have been sent to Sydney for burial.

The weather is fine, and the crops promise to be very abundant this year.

GULGONG, Wednesday.

A coroner's inquest was held yesterday at Pine Ridge station, near Denisontown, on William Montague Cook, aged 48, tank contractor, who died suddenly on Sunday night of disease of the heart. Deceased leaves a wife and eight children poorly off. A collection has been made on their behalf at the station.

The weather is cloudy and warm, threatening for a storm.

KIAMA, Wednesday.

Soundings have been taken in the bay, opposite the post-office, where the road is likely to be traversed by the railway. A trial survey has been marked out by Mr. Wells.

A grant of £600 having been obtained by the Gerringong Municipal Council for an extension of the jetty at Boat Harbour, plans and specifications of the proposed structure have been prepared by Mr. R. Longmore, who has built jetties at Bulli and Port Kembla; and tenders for the work will be invited forthwith.

LITHGOW, Wednesday.

The first District Court held here was opened to-day, before his Honor Judge Cansdell. The transfer of the Court from Hartley, where it was formerly held, has given general satisfaction. The cases heard to-day were of no public importance.

Discontent is expressed at Wallerawang at the long delay in consecrating the local cemetery, and appointing trustees. The land set apart for this purpose was long ago surveyed.

WEST MAITLAND, Wednesday.

The agent for the Intercolonial Juvenile Industrial Exhibition at Parramatta, who is on a visit to this district, succeeded to-day in forming an influential local committee, consisting of the Mayors of East and West Maitland, and other leading townsmen. The committee promised every assistance to the project.

BOWRAL, Wednesday.

The Rev. Stanley Howard, Church of England minister, died this afternoon, deeply regretted.

MR. BARBOUR, M.L.A., AT JERILDERIE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

JERILDERIE, Wednesday.

Mr. Barbour, M.L.A., was entertained at a banquet at the Royal Hotel last night, Mr. J. D. Rankin in the chair and Mr. Hugh Arthur in the vice-chair. Among those who attended were the principal selectors in the district. The room was rather too crowded. The usual loyal toasts having been honoured, that of "Our Member" was proposed by the chairman, and drunk enthusiastically. In responding Mr. Barbour said he was glad to come among them, and proud of the hearty reception he had received. Though the district was one of the finest parts of Riverina, there had been no opportunity hitherto of testing its agricultural capabilities. There was no convenient market; but now the railway was coming it would cause an influx of population. They would have an open market in the metropolis. He would recommend the inhabitants to get up a demonstration at the opening, and he would do his best to get Ministers and members of Parliament to be present to judge for themselves the splendid prospects of Jerilderie. Referring to the Yanko Creek dams shutting back water he said Government should interfere. The money lately expended in Yanko cutting was thrown away, if dams were allowed to be erected to throw the water back on the river. A bill must be introduced into Parliament to deal with the case. Ordinary means would not do. Legislation should direct people how far they should go in erecting dams. He was in favour of overshot dams. The wants of the district, if communicated to him, would receive immediate attention. Responding to the toast of "The Parliament," he referred to the land question, and spoke at great length. The electors had themselves to blame that the Act of 1861 had not done the good it ought to have done, for returning such representatives. He considered the way the land had been frittered away was a public wrong. Many millions were consequently lost to the Treasury. He was still in favour of the abolition of interest. The ensuing session would deal with a new Land Bill, which would be one of the first measures introduced. He trusted it would be framed to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and not as heretofore to the few. Several other toasts were proposed and responded to during the evening. Mr. Barbour left for Deniliquin to-day, and will receive a deputation from the Deniliquin Town Council this evening.

KIAMA, Wednesday.

This morning at 9.30, the I. S. N. Company's new steamer Bega entered the harbour flying the flag of the Marine Board. The fact of this being the Bega's first call at Kiama, and the knowledge that several members of the Marine Board were on board, attracted a good number of townspeople to the wharf, where, first, they had a quiet stare at the strangers, and then took a good look at the latest addition to the steam company's fleet. The Bega is a very smart little vessel, and she was much admired by those who inspected her. Captain Hixson, the Colonial Architect, Mr. Watts, and some five or six others composed the visitors, who had been on a tour of inspection to the southern lighthouses. They spent about an hour in Kiama. During their short stay they had a look at the new building in course of erection, which is to serve the purpose of lockup and constables' quarters; also the Post and Telegraph Offices. They also inspected the temporary lighthouse, and afterwards the blue metal quarries. Captain Hixson and the Colonial Architect remain here for a few days on business connected with the harbour requirements.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

The mining manager of the Long Tunnel Gold-mining Company, Limited, Uralla, reports, under date 17th instant:—"The drive in the course of the main tunnel has been driven 8 feet. The water is still very strong, and the drift very fine, and hard for driving; dirt very poor. The eastern drive has been driven 12 feet. The water is still pretty strong, but the ground is firmer and better driving, and is still in payable dirt. No. 2 jump-up: The dirt is still payable. I have only two hands on here at present. I have put the others at the shaft. We have cut down the new shaft, and have started to sink to-day. I have got about 5oz. of gold this week. I expect to bottom the shaft on Thursday."

The mining manager of the Brickwood Tin-mining Company, Limited, reports 5 tons tin ore sold for the week ended September 15.

The mining manager of the Queen of the Mount Gold-mining Company, No Liability, Mount M'Donald, reports under date September 15:—"The last crushing has gone 29½oz. to the ton. The sinking and driving are progressing, and I think the claim will eventually pay."

The mining manager of the Prince of Wales Gold-mining Company, No Liability, Burnt Yards, Carcoar, reports under date September 15:—"the tramway is now completed, and I am now constructing platform, &c., for engine and boiler for winding purposes. The winding engine has not yet arrived, but have everything ready for same. The last crushing has fully turned out to my expectations, and I hope soon to be able to put through 250 tons per week."

The quantities of tin ore received at Newcastle and Morpeth for the weeks ended the dates named were:—28th July, 71 tons 10cwt. 3qr.; 11th August, 43 tons 16cwt. 1qr.; 18th August, 57 tons 10cwt. 3qr.

The quantity of copper received at Darling Harbour station for the week ended 21st July was 182 tons 13cwt.; week ended 28th July, 166 tons 12cwt.; week ended 11th August, 193 tons 9cwt. 3qr.; and week ended 18th August, 194 tons 4cwt. 1qr.

NORTHERN JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

WEST MAITLAND, Wednesday.

The weather for the opening day of the Northern Jockey Club Spring meeting was delightfully fine, and the attendance was estimated at about a thousand people. The racing throughout was good, the Hurdle Race being particularly interesting. The winner of the N. J. C. Handicap turned up in Budelight, who left the paddock at 5 to 1. After weighing in, Gladiator, who ran second, was found to be short weight, and was disqualified. The Epsom Handicap was a most exciting race, nearly everything being well in it at the finish. There were several booths and refreshment stalls on the ground, and games of chance and other amusements incidental to racing were numerous. Leon Hammond had the grand stand booth, and served a good luncheon. The starting was capital, and the judge gave every satisfaction. Below is a detailed account of the running:—

Handicap Hurdle Race, of 50 sovs., with sweep of 3 sovs. each added. For all horses. Over nine jumps, 3 feet 6 inches high. Second horse 10 sovs. from the prize. Distance, 2 miles.

Mr. T. Carlisle's b g Chesterton, late Chester, aged, 10st. 4lb., including 2½lb. over (Monk) ... 1
Mr. Jno. Mayo's b g War Eagle, aged, 11st. 11lb. (Roarty) ... 2
Mr. J. M'Crowe's b c Vidette, 5 years, 9st. (M'Crowe) ... 3
Dr. A. Nash's b g Satellite, aged, 10st. 11lb. (Solly) ... 0
Mr. T. Hughes' ch m Ethel, aged, 9st. 8lb. (Chitney) ... 0

Betting: 2 to 1 on the field.

The lot were despatched on even terms, Ethel leading over the first hurdle, which all negotiated nicely. Going on towards the back of the course Ethel led by four lengths, Satellite next, followed by Vidette and War Eagle, Chesterton being last. This order was maintained until reaching the stand the second time round, when the field closed up somewhat, though all were jumping splendidly. At the Elgin-street turn Satellite assumed the lead, with War Eagle in close attendance, Ethel and Vidette next, after which Chesterton was coming very fast. At the last hurdle Satellite ran outside and Ethel inside the hurdle, and the race was then left between Chesterton and War Eagle, the former coming away and winning comfortably by three lengths; Vidette, two lengths off, third. Time, 4 minutes 8 seconds.

Flying Handicap, of 2 sovs. each for starters, with 40 sovs. added. Second horse 5 sovs. from the prize. 7 furlongs.

Mr. O. Allen's b g Epicure, 5 years, 6st. 10lb. (R. Lynch) ... 1
Mr. C. C. Chilcott's b g Blazes, aged, 7st. 5lb. (Handley) ... 2
Mr. E. Chippendale's ch c Tornado, 3 years, 6st. 8lb. (D. Roarty) ... 3
Mr. H. J. Adams' br g Claudius, 6 years, 7st. 9lb. (Nerricker) ... 0
Mr. A. A. Nivison's br g Erin, 5 years, 7st. 9lb. (Nicholson) ... 0
Mr. T. Cook's b c Marmion, 5 years, 7st. 7lb. (Neadric) ... 0
Mr. S. Cohen's b m Una (late Eva), 5 years, 6st. 12lb. (Alford) ... 0
Mr. J. Maloney's ch m Mileta, 4 years, 6st. 10lb. (Lindsay) ... 0
Mr. S. Leggatt's br f Uralla, 3 years, 6st. 6lb. (Phœnix) ... 0

Betting: 2 to 1 Erin, 4 to 1 bar one.

Marmion jumped away with the lead directly the flag fell, and the colours of Una, Erin, and Mileta showed next; Uralla, who was left at the post, being last. On reaching the far side of the course Una went to the front, attended by Marmion, Mileta, Epicure, and Erin, the rest of the field several lengths off. Entering the straight Epicure came through his horses, and was winning easily, when Blazes came with a rush, and was just beaten by a head. Tornado was a good third, the others three lengths away. Time, 1 minute 31½ seconds.

Northern Jockey Club Handicap, sweepstake of 5 sovs. each for starters, with 150 sovs. added; second horse 10 sovs. from the prize. 1½ mile.

Mr. C. Hunt's b h Budelight, 5 years, 7st. (Lindsay) ... 1
Mr. H. Herberton's ch h Albert Victor, 4 years, 7st. 4lb. (Handley) ... 2
Mr. E. Chippendale's ch h Lochinvar, 5 years, 8st. 7lb. (J. Lindsay) ... 0
Mr. J. Mooney's ch h Gladiator, 4 years, 7st. 3lb. (Hayes) ... 0
Mr. J. Mayo's bk h Faust, 5 years, 7st. 4lb. (Nicholson) ... 0
Hon. John Eales' ch m Maid of the Hills (late Jandiress), 6 years, 6st. 10lb. (Nerricker) ... 0

Betting: 2 to 1 v. Gladiator, 5 to 2 v. Faust, 3 to 1 v. Albert Victor, 6 to 1 v. others.

The flag fell to an excellent start, Gladiator at once taking up the running, and leading past the stand by two lengths, Albert Victor, Budelight, Faust, and Maid of the Hills being next in order, Lochinvar last. Rounding the turn Gladiator still led, and Faust ran up—the others, with the exception of Lochinvar, getting on better terms with the leaders. In the straight Budelight came through his field, and won very easily by three lengths from Gladiator, who beat Albert Victor by a length for third place. Faust was fourth, Maid of the Hills fifth, and Lochinvar last. Time, 3 minutes [illegible] seconds. When the riders weighed in, Gladiator was short of weight, and was disqualified, Albert Victor getting second place.

Prince of Wales Stakes, of 10 sovs., w[illegible] sovs. added; the winner to [illegible] 6 furlongs.

Hon. J. Eales' br f Rosebud, 3 years, [illegible] ... 1
Mr. J. C. Lawson's ch g Redding, aged, [illegible] ... 2
Mr. W. [illegible] ... 3
Mr. R. Owen's b m [illegible] (Lindsay) ... 0
Mr. W. Davis' b g Whisper, [illegible] ... 0
Mr. R. C. Watt's b g [illegible] ... 0

Betting: 2 to 1 on [illegible] and Pathos, 10 to 1 v. anything else.

Rosebud led from the start, and won very easily by two lengths from Redding, the others well up. Time, 1 minute 21 seconds.

Epsom Handicap, of 2 sovs. each for starters, with 40 sovs. added. Second horse 5 sovs. from the prize. 1 mile and a furlong.

Mr. J. Maloney's ch m Mileta, 4 years, [illegible] ... 1
Mr. R. Chapman's br g Hesitation, aged, [illegible] (Nerricker) ... 2
Mr. C. M'Donnell's blk g Zulu, aged, [illegible] ... 3
Mr. A. A. Nivison's br g Erin, 5 years, [illegible] ... 0
Dr. Conny's Sancho Panza, 4 years, 6st. 11lb. [illegible] ... 0
Mr. W. C. Maxwell's b g m Bridesmaid, 4 years, 6st. 8lb. (O'Keefe) ... 0
Mr. T. Cook's b m Myra, 3 years, 6st. 6lb. (Alford) ... 0
Mr. C. Allen's b g Epicure, 5 years, 6st. 6lb. (Nicholson) ... 0
Mr. J. Kerrigan's b c Levi, 3 years, 5st. 5lb. (Hodan) ... 0

Betting: Even on Epicure, 2 to 1 v. Hesitation, 10 to 1 v. Mileta.

After a deal of delay the field was sent away on good terms, and passing the stand Zulu had a slight lead, Mileta, Bridesmaid, Hesitation, and Epicure next, Myra and Sancho Panza last. Zulu conducted his field to the back of the course, where he gave place to Mileta, and Hesitation went up third. The field closed on entering the straight, and Epicure shot out, but at the distance Zulu, Hesitation, and Mileta got to the lead of affairs, and a most exciting race ensued, ending in favour of Mileta by a bare half-head. The others were so close together that the judge was unable to place the third horse. Time, 2 minutes.

CRICKET.

The annual meeting of the members of the Albert Cricket Club will be held this evening at the Exchange Hotel at 8 o'clock, when the annual report will be read and the trophies won during the past season presented.

Mr. W. C. Woolcott, hon. secretary to the Eureka Cricket Club, states that we were misinformed as to the captainship and vice-captainship of that club. That gentleman states that the respective positions are held by Mr. Melswimer and Mr. Saddler. The report forwarded was entirely wrong.

A special meeting of the Oriental Cricket Club was held at Johnston's Hotel, Oxford-street, last Monday evening. There was a large attendance of members present. Mr. R. Burke (in the absence of one of the vice-presidents, who was unable to attend till later in the evening), occupied the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A letter was read from the Goulburn Cricket Club inviting the club to play there during the season. It was agreed that the club should visit Goulburn, Yass, and Cootamundra, during the Easter holidays, and the hon. secretary was requested to make all arrangements. Mr. George Eastway, jun., was elected a vice-president of the club. Mr. Fred. Luland was again re-elected as captain of the club for the ensuing season. The hon. secretary informed the meeting that the following gentlemen had promised to give trophies for play shown during the ensuing season, viz., Mr. G. Eastway, junr., a £5 5s. trophy for highest single not out innings scored throughout the season; Mr. F. Luland, a £2 2s. trophy for the best fielding; Mr. B. Burke, a £2 2s. trophy for the highest single innings (out) scored; Mr. A. Kidman, a £2 2s. trophy for second best bowling average; Mr. A. M'Crea, a £2 2s. trophy for most double figures scored; and Mr. C. I. Patison, junr., a £3 3s. trophy. The following trophies are also given by the club:—Best batting average, second best batting average, and best bowling average. One of the members promised to give a trophy for the most duck eggs obtained throughout the season. Eight new members were elected, making in all a total of 38. Several minor matter were discussed, and the meeting adjourned, with vote of thanks to the chairman. The club opens its season on Saturday next, the 22nd instant.

SYDNEY AMATEUR ATHLETIC CLUB SPORTS.

The following are the handicaps for the sports' meeting to be held on Saturday next, on the Association Cricket Ground, under the auspices of the above club:—

Four Miles Bicycle Race.—A. Lee, scratch; E. C. Wood, 140 yards; W. J. Paterson, 270 yards; J. Power, 300 yards; J. Copland, 325 yards; E. H. M'Crae, 325 yards; Lester, 345 yards; J. M. Ferguson, 345 yards; J. W. Godwin, 350 yards; Robertson, 400 yards; M'Donald, 400 yards; F. Peers, 450 yards; J. Gosbell, 450 yards.

440 Yards Handicap Flat Race.—J. Ferris and E. A. Grainger, scratch; T. Gilfillan, 8 yards; J. F. Burke, 10 yards; M. Bayley, 20 yards; F. F. Jones, 20 yards; R. B. Hill, 25 yards.

150 Yards Flat Race Handicap.—T. M. Thomson, scratch; F. W. Baylis, 1 yard; E. A. Grainger, 2 yards; P. C. Fairland, 4 yards; C. J. Patison, 4 yards; T. Gilfillan, 5 yards; H. P. Curtis, 5 yards; A. G. Day, 7 yards; D. R. Campbell, 10 yards.

One Mile Flat Race Handicap.—J. Ferris, scratch; D. D. Middleton, 10 yards; P. R. Pedley, 30 yards; J. F. Burke, 35 yards; J. D. Webster, 35 yards; G. B. King, 80 yards.

One Mile Walking Handicap.—G. M. Robinson, scratch; W. Nicholson, 10 seconds; E. P. Bradley, 15 seconds.

Besides these races there are the Two Miles Walking Challenge Cup to be won twice in succession, the 100 Yards Flat Race Challenge Cup, at present held by Mr. T. M. Thomson; a Schools' One Mile Walking and Half Mile Champion, a Maiden Mile Bicycle, a High Jump, &c.; and as most of the competitors are in active training, a good day's sport may be expected, and if the weather is propitious, fast times are likely to be done.

TORPEDO RIFLE CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Torpedo Rifle Club took place on Saturday last, the 15th instant, 500 and 600 yards, the following being the scores:—

| | Actual Score. | H'cap. | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Private Passmore, 1st prize | 40 | 20 | 60 |
| Private Clay, 2nd prize | 52 | 0 | 52 |

| Private Murphy | 51 | 0 | 51 |
| Corporal Hedges | 45 | 5 | 50 |
| Lieutenant Hammond | 46 | 3 | 49 |
| Private Bussell | 38 | 5 | 43 |

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

"Taken from Life"—full, as it is, of humour, pathos, and sensational plot—appears to satisfy to a very large measure the patrons of the Theatre Royal, and last night was received with the customary manifestations of pleasure. The company which presents it, and which plays under the banner of Mr. Bland Holt, is an unusually clever one, and as a gratifying consequence it does justice to the conceptions of the author of the drama. Much attractiveness is added to the acting by the introduction of excellent scenery and elegant costumes, and at several periods of the performance the stage presents an extraordinary scene of theatrical splendour.

GAIETY THEATRE.

Last evening the "Merchant of Venice" was performed in the Gaiety Theatre; Herr Bandmann playing the character of Shylock, and Miss Beaudet that of Portia. Herr Bandmann's performance of Shylock is so well known to the play-going public as a complete and artistic conception—one in which he has scored a success that has gone far to establish him as an actor of ability—that it needs but the briefest reference. In the test of the play—the trial scene—he acted with an earnestness and an intensity that held his audience in such silence that the proverbial pin might have been heard to drop. Miss Beaudet's Portia, if not quite the realisation of the general conception of the character, and savouring occasionally too much of the [illegible] "Woman of the People," was yet a performance which placed her far above the ranks of her fellow-performers, to whom, with the exception, perhaps, of Mr. Grover as Antonio, might be given, as regards their performances of Shakspeare's plays, Punch's very kindly advice to those about to marry, "Don't." The "Merchant of Venice" will be performed again to-night.

OPERA HOUSE.

As [illegible] the Polk Company have been [illegible] drawing large audiences by the presentation of "An Arabian Night." The comedy, which abounds with humorous dialogue and droll yet exciting incidents, produces unbroken merriment from the rising of the curtain [illegible], and in a circus scene which is introduced, [illegible] that the voices of [illegible] are almost drowned by it.

MASONIC HALL.

[illegible] minstrels have been a successful here [illegible] as the Federal Minstrels, who are now playing at the Masonic Hall, under the direction of [illegible]. The [illegible] their programme [illegible] and choruses, which are sung with [illegible], and have the advantage of [illegible] instrumentation. Several farces are also played, in which the [illegible] the actors for creating mirth are [illegible], and the feelings of the audience are kept [illegible] consequence. In the third part [illegible] programme [illegible], which, though not marked with [illegible] of composition, is a vehicle for introducing some [illegible] vocal harmonies, which are rendered by various artists in character.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

At the Academy of Music Mr. Mills is still amusing audiences by his comical ventriloquism, and his group of figures, which, under his direction, sing and speak almost as perfectly as if they were inspired with natural faculties for doing so.

This evening the third concert by Herr Vogrich, assisted by Miss Alice Rees and Herr Kretschmann, will be given in the Protestant Hall, and judging by the interest taken in the last should attract a large audience.

A literary and musical entertainment in connection with the Christian Sunday-school, Elizabeth-street South, was given by the scholars, assisted by the teachers and friends, on Tuesday evening last, in their chapel. Mr. G. W. Logan occupied the chair. The various items on the programme were very nicely rendered.

BAZAAR AT BURWOOD.

A bazaar and sale of useful and fancy goods, in aid of liquidating the debt on St. Paul's Church, Burwood, was opened yesterday by Mr. W. H. Pigott, M.L.A., in the Burwood School of Arts. The formal opening ceremony took place at 3 o'clock, at which time the attendance, although not large, was fully up to expectations. The Rev. R. W. Young, minister of the church, on behalf of the lady stallholders and those chiefly interested, requested Mr. Pigott to declare the bazaar open, and in doing so stated that everything had been done to make it a thorough success. Mr. Pigott, on coming forward, said, although he had been engaged in many public matters in the course of his life, nothing had given him greater pleasure than in being present to declare the bazaar open. It was one of the greatest honours which could be conferred upon him, as one of the members for the electorate, in being so kindly asked to take part in the opening of the bazaar that day. There were few things more encouraging than to look round and see that in the nineteenth century ladies had taken the position they were entitled to take. There were countries even now where the ladies did not occupy the position they should, and it was not too much to say that they ought to take a position fully equal to the other sex. They knew that among the old Romans and Greeks, and all the civilisation other than the Christian dispensation, it had been entirely the other way; ladies had been compelled to occupy low and degraded positions, and even in the present day, in such countries as France, Italy, and Germany, women were, to a large extent nothing more than mere drudges. They had seen what women could do when brought to the front and banded together, devoting all their energies and taking part in the work of paying off the debt upon a church in which they could all worship. It was not necessary for him to detain them with a long speech, and they all knew the object for which the bazaar had been opened. He trusted that it was only one of many institutions of a like character by which money would be raised for the purpose of liquidating the debt upon the church, and he hoped they would all aid in making the bazaar a success. The ladies had done their part well, for they had only to look around, and it was easy to tell what an immense amount of time and anxiety it had taken to get up such a display as the one before them. After a few more remarks, Mr. Pigott said he had much pleasure in declaring the bazaar formally opened. At the conclusion of Mr. Pigott's remarks, those present turned their attention to inspecting and purchasing the articles exhibited for sale. The arrangements in connection with the bazaar appeared to be complete in every particular, and the hall in which it is being held is suitable in every respect. The inside of the building was tastefully decorated with flags, which, combined with the attractive display of goods, presented a very pretty appearance. There are six stalls independent of a refreshment and a flower stall, and these are conveniently arranged on each side of the building, allowing sufficient room for a very large attendance. The stock of goods is a large and varied one, including almost every trifle necessary to complete such a fair. The stalls are presided over by ladies connected with the church, and judging from the busy manner in which they were employed, especially last evening, the results should be very favourable. The bazaar will be continued to-day after 3 o'clock, and also on Friday, on which day it will be opened at 7 o'clock in the evening.

NIMROD FISHING CLUB PICNIC.

A very successful picnic, under the auspices of the well-known Nimrod Fishing Club, was held yesterday at Clontarf. The Port Jackson Steamship Company's new steamer Port Jackson made two trips from the Circular Quay to Clontarf, taking nearly 300 pleasure-seekers, including Mr. J. Harris, M.L.A., the Mayor of Sydney, under whose patronage the picnic was held, Alderman Meeks, Mr. John Woods, Mr. Hugh George, and others. An excellent spread was provided in the pavilion at Clontarf, the Mayor presiding. After the usual loyal toasts had been honoured, Mr. Woods proposed "Success to the Nimrod Club," coupling with the toast the name of the president, Mr. John Starkey. He stated that this club had been in existence 10 years, and had been the means of enabling a very large number of the citizens to enjoy frequent outings, in the shape of fishing excursions, which had been highly appreciated as a relief from the strain of business, and as excellent opportunities for genuine sport. Mr. Starkey having returned thanks, Mr. George Eastway, captain of the Nimrod Club, proposed "The Directors of the Port Jackson Steamship Company," and the compliment was acknowledged by Mr. Woods, as chairman of the board of directors. The other toasts were "The Ladies," proposed by Mr. H. George, and responded to by Mr. G. L. Goodman in a brief and happy speech; and "The Press," proposed by Mr. G. P. Caswell, and responded to by Mr. George. The following prizes, won by members of the club in connection with the fishing excursions, were presented at the dinner:—To Mr. George Eastway, captain of the club, for the largest haul, a very handsome and costly gold medal, presented by Mr. A. Huenerbein; to Mr. W. J. Clarke, for the second largest catch, a trophy presented by Mr. B. O. Holtermann, M.L.A.; to Mr. A. Huenerbein, for catching the three finest fish, a handsome vase of beautiful wax flowers, made and presented by Mrs. Walter Sharman; and to Mr. J. Chowney, representative of the Port Jackson Steamship Company, a trophy presented by the club as an acknowledgment of his attention to the members on the occasion of their excursions. It was stated that the club had during the past season caught a total of 3357 schnapper, and 2000 other kinds of fish, or nearly 2000 more than in the previous year. It was also announced that next year Mr. Kerr, jeweller, would give a gold medal for the most schnapper caught by a member who had never won a trophy before. During the afternoon a programme of races, for which prizes of more than usual value were offered, was gone through, and dancing was also indulged in throughout the day in the splendid new pavilion which has recently been erected on the ground. The catering was performed by the City Catering Company, and a special selection of oysters was provided by Mr. Emerson. The excursionists returned to Sydney about half-past 6 o'clock.

AUSTRALIA AND THE UNITED STATES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It has been suggested to me that, as I contemplate visiting the United States in the early part of next year, I be accompanied by 25 or 30 gentlemen from the colonies, representing, as it were, your different industries, to make a tour through that country, cross the line, and call on their English friends in Canada; and those desiring to do so could visit their mother country before returning.

This having emanated from several of the leading business men in Sydney, I must say, after due consideration, that I heartily endorse the movement, and think it would prove of incalculable advantage to the business interests of both countries. I am pleased to learn that a number have already signified their intention to become members of the party.

Feeling as I do a great interest in the welfare of the colonies, and the extension of acquaintance and trade with the country I represent, it would be exceedingly gratifying to me to see the subject taken up by other prominent gentlemen, and for this purpose I set the matter before the public through the columns of your popular journal, and trust it will meet with approval.

Judging from the questions asked me while on my last visit, I am confident that the American people, generally, have little idea of what an extensive and important country Australia is, and there is no doubt that if the influential men of both countries would interchange opinions on matters of mutual interest, it would not only facilitate and increase trade, but also accomplish many other good results.

There is scarcely a city of any prominence in the States that I have not visited, and I can safely say that "Your American Cousins" would welcome such a distinguished body with outstretched arms, making them feel perfectly at home, and their only regret would be that they had not before known the country and people better.

Should this project be carried through, I feel assured that a party of American representatives men would shortly after pay a visit to the Australian colonies.

Any correspondence received on this subject will receive my careful and immediate attention.

CHARLES KAHLO, U. S. Consul.

Inferior and long-journeyed cattle about the same as last week. Best pens £12 to £13, a few higher; good, £10 10s to £11 10s; medium to £9. Cows sold to £9 10s. Our sales are from Terrick's and near town. Fat Sheep: 12,000. Market brisk. Lambs: 4400; beyond requirements, and prices down 1s to 1s 6d. We sold through the yards 1500 sheep and 300 lambs.

Messrs. Ryan and Hammond report:—Fat Cattle: 1583 penned, 600 from Queensland, the balance Victorian and Riverina; quality chiefly medium and inferior, with a few prime. The market was brisk and good quality, and we sold at an advance on last week; best pen of bullocks made to £15 5s; best pen of Queensland bullocks to £13 5s; cows to £10. Fat Sheep: 12,000 yarded, of medium quality; market brisk, and best sold at an advance of 6d; best crossbreds to 21s; best merinos to 16s. We sold 300 merinoes and 130 crossbreds.

The Function of the Sound-Post in the Violin.—It is undoubtedly true that the sound-post of a violin does communicated the vibrations from the belly of the instrument to the back: but, as will be hereafter seen, these vibrations are not of an order to reinforce the sound except to a limited extent. By far the most important function of the sound-post is that it acts as a prop to the belly in such a position and in such a manner as to enable the latter to give out a more resonant order of waves. The latter may, and does, give out a modicum of sound, but it is especially the belly which becomes more resonant under the influence of the prop than without it. In the first place, when the sound-post is removed the belly of the violin is then an uninterrupted elastic table with a vibration rate of its own, its greatest elasticity being just at the part where the bridge is situated. Now it may safely be predicted, without resorting to experiment, that this specific rate of vibration of the belly itself will interfere with the varying rates of vibration communicated to it by the strings. That it is so, however, I have conclusively proved by actual experiments in great variety, and when such interference takes place the tone is always meagre, as described by Dr. Huggins.—Nature.

ARCHBISHOP VAUGHAN.
The PRESS, the CLERGY, and the PUBLIC accord the greatest praise to "Dr. VAUGHAN'S LIFE AND LABOURS," just published,
by Mr. T. J. MURRAY.
The book is written by Mr. JAMES T. DONOVAN,
Sub-editor "Freeman's Journal," and
Sketches of Dr. Vaughan and his Life at St. John's College are original and profoundly interesting.
The chapters on the Archbishop's Father and Family, and the description of Dr. VAUGHAN'S TRIP TO AMERICA, are full of interest, and the whole publication is the best and cheapest ever published in the colony.
To be had at all booksellers.

TO INVESTORS, SPECULATORS, MERCHANTS, and CAPITALISTS.
FOR PRIVATE SALE,
THE BOWENFELS COLLIERY,
LITHGOW VALLEY.
MILLS and PILE have been instructed to sell the Bowenfels Coal Company's Property by Private Contract, which consists of 100 ACRES of COAL-BEARING LAND, held under secured mineral purchase.
IN WORKING ORDER,
and connected with the Great Western Railway line by a private line to the mine, and only about 6 acres have been worked.
The plant comprises waggons, skips, rails, staithes, screen, and the necessary materials for a working mine.
The coal is drawn out of the mine by a tunnel at an easy gradient, and can therefore be worked in the least expensive manner, and is easily drained.
A large area of coal land joining the mine can be had if desired by purchase or royalty.
Any immediate purchaser of this valuable and fully proved property will have an opportunity of tendering for next year's Government contract, as well as a share of the constantly extending private trade.
Particulars can be obtained and plans inspected at the Sydney Auction Mart, Pitt-street, Sydney, and terms can be arranged.

Medical, Chemicals, &c.

PEPPER'S QUININE AND IRON TONIC possesses all the powers of these valuable tonics in banishing diseases and symptoms traceable to weakness. It rouses and develops the nervous energies, causing increased action of all the nerve centres, enriches the blood, promotes appetite, dispels languor and depression.

PEPPER'S QUININE and IRON TONIC strengthens the nerves and muscular system, improves digestion, animates the spirits, thoroughly recruits the health and strength. Bottles (32 doses), 4s 6d. Sold by chemists everywhere. Insist on having Pepper's Tonic. Made only by J. Pepper and Co., London.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.—An External Means of CURING SKIN DISEASES. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to "Sulpholine," and commence to fade away in a few days. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness vanish as if by magic; while old, enduring skin disorders that have plagued the sufferers for years, however deeply rooted they may be, "Sulpholine" will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalculæ which cause these unsightly, irritable, painful affections, and always produces a clear, healthy condition of the skin. "Sulpholine" Lotion is sold by most Chemists, and ELLIOT BROTHERS, Sydney. Bottles, 2s 9d. Made only by J. PEPPER and CO., London.

TARAXACUM and PODOPHYLLIN.—This fluid combination, as a stimulant to disordered liver, is safer than calomel, blue pill, or destructive antibilious medicines. In all cases of congestion or liver complaint, Taraxacum and Podophyllin sets the sluggish liver in action, moves the stomach very gently indeed, giving a sense of clearness and comfort within a few hours. The symptoms of liver derangement—headache, torpidity, costiveness, flatulence, heartburn, sense of over-repletion, shoulder pains, repugnance to food, general discomfort and depression—are quickly dispelled by Taraxacum and Podophyllin. Prepared solely by J. PEPPER and CO., London. Insist on having the correct preparation. Bottles, 2s 9d and 4s. 6d. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

NOS. 324, 326, 328, GEORGE-STREET.
September 15, 1883.
To our Friends and Patrons.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—
Having made satisfactory arrangements for the renewal of our Lease and a continuance of our Partnership, we are glad to be able to inform you that the business will be carried on as usual, under the same name and title.
We have to thank our friends for the liberal amount of patronage we have at all times been honoured with, and particularly for the hearty response we met with from the public at our first and only selling off. We think all will admit that it was a genuine sale, and we can say without exaggeration it was one of the most successful ever held in Sydney.
We are now just completing extensive alterations and improvements to modernise our premises to facilitate business operations generally. We have already received over one hundred cases of new goods for the Spring, and have large shipments afloat to arrive during the present and following month. Finally, we have reduced our profits to a minimum rate. We purchase nearly all our goods in the home markets for cash, so that we are able to compete at all times with all comers.
We shall be happy to forward patterns of our Spring Goods to old or new friends on application; and the same careful supervision will be given to all country orders as before.
We are, Ladies and Gentlemen,
Yours obediently,
PEAPES and SHAW.

TORRENS' TITLE.

MILLS and PILE have received instructions to sell by public auction, on the ground, on SATURDAY NEXT, September 22nd, at 3.30,
THE ABOVE CHOICE COTTAGE BLOCKS,
Each comprising about 5 acres of beautifully undulating rich basaltic country, capable of growing all those productions which thrive in abundance in this rich district.

Penrith is one of the wonders of New South Wales, and is only now coming to the fore. For some years it was almost as backward as was the now thriving town of Parramatta. Situate in the midst of a beautiful valley at the foot of the Blue Mountains, near the banks of the largest river on the eastern coast, and on the main railway line, it presents advantages which few other towns can lay claim to, and is in consequence rapidly increasing in population and importance.

Its advantageous situation has recommended it to the favourable notice of the Railway Department, and it has been made the principal locomotive station of the west, and the residence of numerous railway employees.

The clearness of the atmosphere and the purity of the water in the river renders Penrith the best situate town for woollen manufacture, which will be an important branch of industry in this colony.

The broad and beautiful valley of the Nepean, in which Penrith is situate, has been pronounced by travellers as similar to the glorious "Vega" of Grenada, so celebrated for its soft and luxurious climate and varied productions.

The lots will be sold on the ground NEXT SATURDAY AFTERNOON, September 22nd, at 3.30.

Terms, 10 per cent. deposit, balance in 36 monthly payments; interest 5 per cent.

Special train at 12.40 from Redfern, and conveyance to the GROUND.

SATURDAY, October 20.
ON THE GROUND.
THE BRUSH FARM TOWNSHIP.
Situate on the main road from Ryde to Parramatta, close to the future railway station on the main railway line from Sydney to Newcastle, the northern districts, and Queensland, and in the centre of the fruit-growing district of Pennant Hills.

MILLS and PILE have received instructions from the proprietors to sell by public auction, on the ground, on SATURDAY, October 20, at 3 o'clock,
THE BRUSH FARM TOWNSHIP,
comprising about 100 ALLOTMENTS OF LAND, each having frontages of 66 to 132 feet to the following streets:—
Railway-street
Wentworth-street
Main Government Road
Blaxland-street
Chanwilliam-street
And other main streets.

It is needless to dilate upon the manifold charms of this magnificent suburban district, of which Brush Farm is the cream and the centre. It is situated on the crest of a SERIES OF RICH BASALTIC HILLS, OVERLOOKING THE PARRAMATTA RIVER and the whole of the southern portion of the county of Cumberland. From many of the beautifully richly rounded peaks, the blue waters of the wide Pacific Ocean can be seen, through the heads of Botany Bay and over the low hills to the south, and the whole expanse of coast from the South Head to the Illawarra mountains are within view. To the west the Prospect Hills, the site of the storage lake to supply Sydney with water, seem to lie at your feet. On portions of this ridge of hills are to be seen the mansions of Messrs. F. and E. Terry, J. E. Manning, and numerous other magnates; and on Brush Farm, besides the palatial mansion, charming grounds, lovely gardens, and orchards of the hospitable proprietor, villas will shortly be built by Messrs. Rowe, Green, Gurridge, and Smith, and many others who purchased at the first and second sales, and who have already planted extensive gardens and orchards preparatory to building.

Not the least of the charms of this superb locality consists in the REMARKABLE PURITY OF THE ATMOSPHERE.

It is, in the true sense of the word, balmy. Far removed from the enervating character of the coast atmosphere, and from the harshness of the mountains; and it is, in fact, a golden mean, equable at all seasons of the year.

Since the first sales the railway which is to connect Sydney with Queensland and with the whole of the northern districts of this colony has been commenced. This railway will pass close alongside this property, and the station will be on the main line of road, as will be shown in the lithographic plans now in course of preparation, bringing Brush Farm within 30 minutes of the metropolis.

The Auctioneers have also received instructions to sell on the ground, at the same time, the remainder of the SUBURBAN PORTION OF THIS ESTATE, consisting of about 20 BLOCKS OF 5 ACRES EACH
or thereabouts, PLANS of which are being prepared.
THE WHOLE OF THIS SPLENDID ESTATE IS UNDER TORRENS' ACT.

The terms are: 20 per cent. deposit, and the balance in four quarterly payments bearing 6 per cent. interest.

Arrangements will be made to convey intending buyers to the ground free of charge.
